Bombers Rip Big Buildings in Heart of London

Parts of City Look Like Ruins Of Earthquake

Britons Brave Another Night of Horror; Battle Above Parliament.

By The United Press.
LONDON, Sept. 10.—(Tuesday)—Big buildings in the heart of London, including one of the city's tallest structures, were ripped apart by the terrific blasts of 500-pound bombs today as wave upon wave of Nazi raiders heaped destruction upon the besieged city.

The all-clear signal came at 5:40 a. m. today (11:40 p. m. Monday, Atlanta time), after a siege of nine hours and two minutes, the second longest raid of the war.

In some sections of London it "looked like an earthquake had

LONDON, (Tuesday), Sept. 10. (UP)—An All-Canadian squadron of the Royal Air Force pursued a force of German raiders directly over the heart of London yesterday and shot down 10 of the Nazi planes in a battle over rooftops of the city, the air ministry announced today.

The Canadian pilots, it was said, chased the Germans from London bridge near the Bank of England to Hammersmith on London's southwestern outskirts.

(A direct air line from London bridge to Hammersmith bridge on the Thames would carry the battle directly over Buckingham palace.)

"Shaken down the buildings," according to eyewitnesses, and it was feared that the estimated toll of 600 dead and 2,500 to 3,000 wounded in the weekend fury of bomb and fire might be increased considerably.

Civilians Knocked Down.
So great was the concussion of bombs exploding in great bunches all around London early today that civilians fleeing from crashing walls were knocked off their feet.

There were direct bomb hits on two central London hospitals, one for children and the other for maternity cases.

A streetcar was overturned by the blast from an explosion.

After a four-hour lapse, long-range guns on both sides of the Straits of Dover resumed shelling. Vivid flashes lit up the channel coast like summer lightning.

The air-bombing attack reached a tremendous crescendo early today, with bombs thudding almost every minute. German planes swooped in and out ceaselessly, dropping cargoes of explosives.

Constant Thud.
At 4 a. m. there was a constant thud of bombs audible in Fleet street, London's newspaper row, in the heart of the city.

One bomb struck an air-raid shelter.

EAGER CROWD—City council's chambers were packed and jammed yesterday by Atlantans anxious to have a recount of the September 4 bond vote to determine whether the bonds really passed or not. They cheered when council unanimously voted to recount all the ballots and to include ballots marked with an "X" or check.

Bond proponents claim the bonds failed in the first count purely because such ballots marked "X" or with a check mark were thrown out.

History's Greatest War Fleet Ordered Built for U. S. Navy

Contracts Totalling $3,861,053,312 Let for 201 Craft in Move To Guarantee Defense of Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Seven monster battleships of 45,000 tons apiece and an armada of 194 other vessels were ordered by the Navy Department today in a $3,861,053,312 batch of contracts designed to equip the United States with a two-ocean Navy greater than anything now afloat.

Georgia Votes Tomorrow in State Primary

Candidates in Last-Minute Appeals; All Are Confident.

By LUKE GREENE.
Candidates for state and county offices made last-minute appeals to Georgia's 540,000 registered voters yesterday as the 1940 campaigns entered their final episode and voters prepared to go to the polls for tomorrow's Democratic primary.

Polls will be open from 7 a. m. to 3 p. m. in rural precincts and from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. in township and city precincts. In Fulton county they will remain open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. and in DeKalb county from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Candidates Confident.

Columbus Roberts' headquarters said yesterday there had been a "fogdown in the Talmadge campaign on the eve of the election" and declared this conclusion was based on a study of the contents of the final pre-election editions of 200 weekly newspaper in the state.

Talmadge and Nix were equally confident as they prepared to ring down the curtain on their campaigns.

Taking a wide swing into south-east Georgia, Talmadge visited Brunswick, Darien, Woodbine, Kingsland, Nahant and Folkston, his headquarters reported. His son, Herman, said the candidate

The group of orders, largest ever placed at one time in U. S. naval history, was announced within a few hours after President Roosevelt signed a $5,251-

000,000 defense appropriation bill providing funds to begin construction.

Signing of the measure brought to nearly $15,000,000,000 the total of defense funds appropriated and authorized by congress this year.

The orders, which went both to private plants and the navy's own shipyards, will call into service private yards where no combat vessel has slid down the ways since World War days.

The seven battleships will cost about $100,000,000 each. The navy announcement did not disclose that they would be 45,000-ton vessels but Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the house naval committee, confirmed a widespread belief that they would be super-ships of that class.

Vinson said today's orders would give the navy a fleet of 12 of that type. He said five were already under construction, but navy officials later asserted that only four were actually being built at present.

The new battleships will be 10,000 tons larger than any now serving with the fleet.

The orders placed today will give the United States a navy of 688 war vessels. Navy press officers said the first keels would be laid in the next six months and that the bulk of the vessels would be completed by December, 1944. They estimated that the battleships would require four or five years to complete, however.

Auditors Check Fund Shortage In Bank, Here

$50,000 to $100,000 Loss, Fully Insured, Reported by C. and S.

Citizens & Southern National Bank officials yesterday said that auditors were working over accounts of the savings department, checking a shortage variously estimated, between $50,000 and $100,000. H. Lane Young, president of the bank, announced last night the loss was fully covered by bond.

Young left yesterday for Savannah to attend the bank's monthly directors' meeting, to be held this morning. He added that a full statement will be made as soon as a bank audit, which commenced Friday, is completed.

The shortage in the bank's accounts was discovered Friday when a trial balance showed $100,000 missing from the savings department of the downtown Atlanta office. Officials stated yesterday that a complete audit of the accounts is expected to scale that sum down considerably.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the national bank examiners office for the Sixth Federal Reserve District were called in when the loss was discovered.

The bank employee whose books are short was not named.

Cone Is Confident Florida for F.D.R.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The Roosevelt-Wallace ticket will carry Florida and Maryland this fall, in the opinion of Democratic leaders from those states who conferred today with Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national chairman.

Governor Fred P. Cone, of Florida, said: "Florida is not alone safe for the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket; it is absolutely secure. There is a question in my mind as to whether Willie in Florida today is any stronger than Landon was four years ago."

Police Car Was Without Lights, Witnesses to Crash Declare

Patrolmen Traveled at Speed of 85 to 100 Miles an Hour in Attempt To Catch Auto, According to Testimony.

(Pictures on Page 2.)
Investigation yesterday of a crash of an Atlanta police automobile into a milk truck early Sunday morning, on the Buford highway near Cheshire Bridge road, brought witnesses who declared the police vehicle, containing Officers F. A. Rhodes and J. C. Varnum, was traveling without lights at from 85 to 100 miles an hour and attempted to pass on a curve the speeding automobile it was chasing.

Chief George Mathieson, of the Fulton county police, within whose jurisdiction the crash took place, said late yesterday he would inquire further of his Patrolmen J. O. Smith and F. C. Thompson as to what their investigation had disclosed. A city police probe was said to be under way by Captain W. M. Weaver.

State police declared they had received no report of the crash and did not plan bringing any charge.

D. A. Pirkle, dairyman of Route 1, Doraville, owner of the truck, said Lieutenant Tippen of Atlanta Police Chief Hornsby's office, had talked to him soon after the crash about the damage to the truck and promised that Atlanta police would pay for repairs. The badly damaged truck was in a garage at Brookhaven.

Hornsby's office denied the offer to pay for the damage.

Both Pirkle and Cecil Hewatt, brother of the driver, Clifford Hewatt, and also an occupant of the truck, said Clifford swerved far to the right in an effort to avoid the oncoming police automobile, which he did not see on the curve until the last moment before the crash because it was without headlights.

County Policemen Smith and Thompson in their report estimated the sped at 85 miles an hour. Residents on Piedmont avenue just beyond Tenth street, more than two miles from the crash, told of seeing the cars go by them rapidly, the police automobile unlit.

The pursued speeder, whose name was given as Henry Adams, 23, guest of a local hotel, was captured by DeKalb county police, who shot his tires to halt the car.

Legal Opinion Upholds Plans Of Procedure

Many Votes Reported Uncounted Because of 'Irregular' Markings.

A recount of the bond election September 4 was ordered yesterday by city council in a unanimous vote at a brief special session called by Mayor Hartsfield.

Council members and bond election managers were ordered to appear at the council chambers at 10 o'clock Friday morning to recount every ballot cast in the election and to count as a vote for bonds those ballots marked with an "X" or a check mark.

Applause broke from the crowded chambers as general council, by voice vote, adopted the recount resolution introduced by Alderman Ed A. Gilliam. Proponents of the proposed $4,000,000 bond issue hope the recount will show that bonds were carried and did not fail by the fewer than 200 ballots as the original count indicated.

Allen Gratified.
"I am gratified," J. P. Allen, chairman of the bond campaign, said following council's action.

Dr. J. Moss Beeler, superintendent of Grady hospital, school officials and fire department officials also expressed pleasure at the action.

Joe Richardson, clerk of council, was instructed to summon every councilman and every bond election manager to jointly recount the ballots. The results must be officially declared at council's regular meeting next Monday.

The procedure of recounting was declared entirely legal by J. Charlie Murphy, assistant city attorney, who said that careful consideration had been given to every point to assure the validity of the bonds if the recount shows that a majority of qualified voters favored the three separate issues in the $4,000,000 hospital, school and fire department improvement program.

Hartsfield's Plea.
Mayor Hartsfield, in a letter to council, emphatically urged council to order the recount.

"I cannot too strongly urge upon you that you order the bond ballot boxes reopened and the ballots recounted," he stated. "It is clearly apparent that the great majority of our people wanted the bonds to pass and I sincerely hope that you will take any action and do everything possible to the end that the bond issue may receive legal approval."

Councilman Allen Couch, asserting he favored the recount, raised the only points about the recount. He questioned whether council could take the action yesterday, but Murphy ruled council could.

LeCraw and Allen sat with Mayor Pro Tem Frank Reynolds on the rostrum during the discussion on the recount.

In giving his opinion to council, Murphy said that any mark signifying the intention of the voter to vote for or against bonds should be counted. Allen and others favored the recount.

Senate Sends Draft Measure To Conference

Conferees Free To Fight 60-Day Postponement Amendment.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The peace-time conscription bill moved on into the conference stage today, with senate conferees free—by a 48-19 senate vote—to fight the house amendment postponing the draft for 60 days.

The situation was the result of a move by Senator Adams, Democrat, Colorado, to cement that much disputed provision into the measure by having the senate instruct its conferees to accept it. Not only did the chamber reject this move, but it voted down, 44 to 23, a proposal that the conferees be bound to insist upon the senate-approved draft age limits of 21 to 30, inclusive. (The house figures are 21 to 44.)

Thus, after weeks of controversy the draft act had reached one of the final phases of legislative action. In conference, representatives of the house and senate discuss the points on which the bills of the two houses are at variance and try to bring them into conformity. Approval of their work by each branch sends a bill on to the White House.

The leading senate supporters of conscription were frankly much pleased at the result of the vote taken. Since the senate had refused to say that its conferees should accept the 60-day postponement amendment, they were inclined to argue that it also had told the conferees to reject it.

At any rate, a conference committee composed entirely of men who voted for the senate bill was appointed to negotiate with the agents of the house. The senate conferees are Senators Sheppard, Democrat, Texas; Reynolds, Democrat, North Carolina; Thomas, Democrat, Utah; Minton, Democrat, Indiana; Austin, Republican, Vermont, and Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire. Sheppard, chairman of the military affairs committee, brought up the question of sending the measure to conference late in the day and immediately an opponent of the measure, Senator Adams, Democrat, Colorado, moved that instead the senate at once approve the house amendments. If approved, the effect on his motion would have been to complete congressional action on the measure and send it to the White House at once.

AFTER THE CRASH—An Atlanta police automobile, attempting, without lights, to pass a fleeing motorist on a curve of the Buford highway, was left in this condition after crashing into a town-bound milk truck and plunging over an embankment. Four persons narrowly escaped severe injury or death.

Seven States Plan Exhibits At Fair Here

Job and Benton Address Georgia Mayors, Editors at Dinner.

Seven southeastern states will have exhibits at the Southeastern World's Fair at Lakewood Park this fall, Richard C. Job, chairman of the state planning commission, reported last night. The displays will include photographs and examples of accomplishments in industry, agriculture, education and recreation, Job said. His announcement was made at a dinner at a downtown hotel attended by mayors and newspaper editors from 60 Georgia towns. Principal speaker was Mike Benton, president of the Fair Association, who announced there would be 60 motorcades to the fair this year from throughout the state. The fair will be held from September 28 to October 6.

Y., tonight to take up temporary residence on Cape Cod. The royal party will reside at the home of Frederic Schaefer, Pittsburgh manufacturer, who has turned over the dwelling and its staff of servants to the crown princess, with whom he has been long acquainted. The crown princess' young family includes Princesses Ragnhild, 11, and Astrid, 9, and Prince Harald, 3 1-2.

was on the final swing "just to drop in on his old friends and thank them for what they will do for him Wednesday."

Nix Thanks Public. In a radio broadcast, Nix thanked the people of Georgia for "the flood of enthusiastic letters from you in support of my candidacy" and predicted "the voters of this state will give us a significantly great victory at the polls on Wednesday."

He charged that "highly financed ballyhoo" was being spread over the state as the campaign neared a close.

Roberts will make three campaign addresses today—one at 10:30 o'clock this morning at Tifton, at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Perry and at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Newnan.

Talmadge's headquarters reported he would probably be at his Atlanta office today before making his final radio appeal from 10:30 to 11 o'clock tonight.

Nix also is expected to be at his headquarters most of the day, although he is scheduled for radio addresses at 4:30 and 9 o'clock.

Ware Ballot in Doubt. Meanwhile, the question of whether Ware county would leave the names of statehouse candidates off the ballot had not been settled.

Frank B. McDonald Jr., chairman of the Ware County Democratic Committee, said over long-distance telephone that the type for the ballots and been set up ready for the presses, and that if the money came through from the state committee they would go to press this morning.

The Ware county committee contends that it is entitled to a share of the $20,750 the state committee distributed to 159 counties for election expenses. Twenty counties received no part of these funds under a party rule, according to Zach Arnold, vice chairman of the state committee.

McDonald said he was prepared to carry out the action of his committee if the money did not come through, which means the elimination of names of the statehouse candidates, other than government nominees, from the ballot.

He added the candidates themselves were not expected to furnish the necessary funds.

In Atlanta, Arnold said he had not been notified that any county definitely would omit the names of any candidates.

Political observers still awaited word from Governor Rivers as to whether he would run for the legislature from Lanier county, although they were beginning to have some doubt that he would.

They thought there might be some significance to a casual sentence in his speech delivered before the Georgia Prison Wardens' Association in Valdosta.

In this speech he said he was on "the receding tide of politics," and declared, "I am not a candidate for any office."

Candidates for other offices packed their last-minute messages to the voters of the state into statements.

Georgia To Get $3,000,000 U.S. Highway Funds

Money To Be Available by December, Works Director Says.

More than $3,000,000 in federal funds will be available for Georgia highways by December, John M. Carmody, Federal Works administrator, announced yesterday in Washington. The funds are from the 1942-43 fiscal year allocation of federal aid highway money.

A total of $2,509,000 will be available as regular federal aid, which must be matched by a similar sum from the state; $439,000 will go for secondary or feeder roads, and also must be matched by the state, while $489,000 has been set aside for grade crossings and need not be matched with state funds.

The federal administrator also announced plans to construct 3,100 miles of access roads at military reservations and an improvement program for 75,000 miles of strategic highways.

Locations of the various roads was not released. They will be paid for by the federal government if only of military value, but the costs will be borne jointly by government and state if they are of other value.

Georgia's allocation is part of a $134,063,000 allocation set aside for the various states. The military highway projects will be paid for by a $197,000,000 fund now on hand in Washington.

129,402 Ready In Georgia for Defense Jobs

Contracts Let by U. S. Expected To Spur Employment Soon.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Georgia today was revealed to have 129,402 unemployed workers ready to take active part in the huge national defense works program now getting well under way.

With the letting of defense building contracts announced late today aggregating nearly the entire amount of the $5,000,000,000 appropriation bill signed today by President Roosevelt, it is expected that many of these Georgians will be given employment in the near future.

The number of workers available in Georgia was revealed following announcement by the national defense commission, through Sidney Hillman, commissioner in charge of the labor division, that more than 5,000,000 unemployed workers throughout the nation have been classified and are available for work.

Hillman's figure was taken from an inventory of job seekers registered in public employment offices as of April, 1940.

The statistical division of the Bureau of Employment Security, under the Federal Security Administration, issued a report on August 6 giving the number of persons registered at public employment offices as of the April date, with breakdowns for the individual states for occupational classes.

The Georgia figures are as follows: Total number of persons registered in Georgia as seeking jobs, 129,402, including 92,472 men, 36,930 women.

Professional and managerial, 2,120 men and 1,085 women. Clerical and sales, 5,720 men and 6,372 women.

Service, 5,103 men and 9,120 women.

Agricultural, fishery and forestry, 24,139 men and 1,372 women.

Skilled, 15,479 men and 3,440 women.

Semi-skilled, 17,314 men and 7,617 women.

Unskilled, 21,349 men and 5,770 women.

Unassigned, which includes unemployed, students, persons without work experience, and unspecified, 1,246 men and 2,154 women.

LABOR INVENTORY PART OF 3-POINT PROGRAM

The labor inventory is part of a three-point program for meeting any manpower shortages as the defense industries expand. One part of this program is the training of skilled workers by the WPA, CCC and NYA.

Figures on what these agencies are doing in the Atlanta area to train skilled workers were not available last night except from Robert C. Watkins, WPA area engineer, who said the WPA here has about 450 men learning defense trades in schools.

TO TEST GARAND AT CAMP PERRY MEET

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Sept. 9.—(P)—The army Garand (M-1) semi-automatic rifle gets its first competitive tests today and the results are expected to go far towards settling controversy over effectiveness of the new weapon.

A 300-yard, rapid fire event for the Garand tops the day's program. For service and civilian marksmen preliminary to the National Rifle Matches, Captain Rothwell Brown, of Fort Benning, Ga., army expert, predicted that "everyone would be surprised by the scores" turned in by the Garand.

POST SCHOOL TO OPEN AT FORT BENNING

FORT BENNING, Ga., Sept. 9.—With the reopening of the post children's school on September 16 Fort Benning mothers will arise early to wash, clothe and feed sleepy-eyed children to hurry them off to classes.

Registration for all grades, ranging from first to eighth, will take place September 12 and 13. The faculty is the same as last year, with Miss Annie Lou Grimes as principal, a post she has held for a number of years.

High school students started back to classes today. They commute daily between Columbus and the post in buses.

Personnel of Flight "B" of the Sixteenth Observation Squadron, which has been stationed at Fort Benning as Air Corps demonstration troops of the Infantry School, have moved from the special units barracks, where the enlisted men have been quartered at Lawson Field, to a tent camp at Lawson Field, until wooden cantonment type barracks can be built as part of the building program in progress for the vicinity of the air field.

A TRAFFIC IDEA—Ninety per cent of traffic on highways outside of Atlanta is headed for the business district. For the other 10 per cent, beltlines are recommended.

Who Will Hold City Runover Being Disputed

Savage Rules New Democratic Committee Has Immediate Authority

That court action may be necessary to determine whether the old six-man Democratic executive committee will hold the September 18 runover city primary or whether the newly-elected committee will function appeared as a prospect yesterday as City Attorney Jack C. Savage ruled the newly-elected group is authorized to take office immediately.

Savage pointed out specifically that the new committee has no authority to attempt to affect the nomination of Roy LeCraw as mayor, and that the new committee could not rescind the old committee's action in declaring LeCraw the party nominee.

"The same committee which declared the results of the election of new committeemen and thus placed the new group in power, declared LeCraw the nominee," he said. "It is obvious that the new group could not go behind the old committee's declarations."

Cary Asks Ruling

Watson W. Cary, one of the two members in last Wednesday's primary from the Fifth Ward, asked for the ruling, and Savage cited the law on the subject, pointing out that 1937 acts of the general assembly entitled the new committee to assume charge of local primaries as soon as results of the election were declared.

On the other hand, G. C. O'Dell, member of the old committee from the Fifth Ward, who was defeated for re-election, and Seab Sharp, chairman of the old group and Third Ward committeeman who likewise was defeated, contended that the new committee is not entitled to function before they take the oath of office and qualify.

J. Homer Leathers, elected as a member of the new committee from the Third Ward, said as far as he is concerned he hopes the old committee conducts the run-over election.

Cary's action in seeking Savage's opinion, however, was regarded as an indication that some members of the new group wish to assume office immediately. Savage wrote Cary:

"Based upon the foregoing provision of the act of the general assembly of Georgia (an act approved March 30, 1937, and which extended the term of committee-men elected in 1936 for a period of two years), my opinion is that you were entitled to assume the office as a member of the city Democratic executive committee immediately upon the announcement by the committee of your election."

Cites 1933 Act

Savage then cited an act of 1933 requiring that "no person shall... take part in receiving, counting or consolidating the votes or results in any... primary election, who has not first taken the oath prescribed by the law for managers of primary elections," but added the act apparently referred only to managers and clerks and not to members of the executive committee.

The old committee consolidated votes and declared results Thursday night of last Wednesday's primary election in which 11 members were named to a new Democratic committee.

First mention of the contention that the new committee is entitled to assume office immediately was made by members of the Atlanta League of Women Voters. Cary then asked for a specific ruling.

If the new committee attempts to take over and conduct the run-over primary, there were indications yesterday that members of the old committee will resist, and there were reports that the old committee will insist on holding its own run-over even if the new committee sets up machinery to conduct a new one.

Everything is affected by the heat wave except the want ad RESULTS in The Constitution.

Traffic Plan Sorely Needed, Leaders Say

Speed in Accomplishing Reform Vital, Civic Heads Agree.

A thorough-going plan of traffic control for Atlanta, which will relieve the present devastating congestion of downtown streets, is imperative.

This was declared yesterday by heads of neighborhood civic organizations joining those who had spoken out clearly on the problem, and they added that speed was essential in accomplishing the reform.

"What we need," said J. Lon Duckworth, of the Druid Hills Civic Association, "is an over-all, logical, complete traffic plan, a plan which really solves our problems."

Authority Needed.

"Then we need an individual or group with guts enough and authority enough to put the plan into effect."

"We cannot temporize any longer. We need expert solutions, and honest, unselfish application of them."

It is the belief of Hicks Lanier, of the Brookwood Hills Civic Association, that the recent city election turned on traffic and police issues and this ought to be taken into account in attacking the traffic question.

"People expect action, and now is the time," he declared. "Delay should not be countenanced, for the problem is acute."

More Serious Here.

"This city needs a real traffic plan. Its streets and organization are such as to make the problem more serious here than in many other cities."

"I fully agree that engineers should be asked to analyze conditions and find the remedy, and that this remedy then should be put into effect without fear or favor.

"You can't have a traffic plan that veers in any direction and solve the problems which face us. Whole-hearted, united and intelligent action will end our troubles. 'Let's go to it—now.'"

Canada To Train Fliers in Winter

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 9.—(P)—Air training will be carried on during the winter across Canada almost as effectively as in the summer, James S. Duncan, deputy minister for air, said today.

One proposal has reached Ottawa that training be transferred from Canada to Florida, Duncan added, but he said such a step never had been considered by the air ministry.

In the last war some Canadian fliers trained in southern states. But since then, by the use of skis, winter flying has become common in Canada. No overtures have been made to United States to permit training there, it was stated.

SINGING CONVENTION.

A Campaign for Judicial Office Is No ORDINARY Political Contest

A candidate who seeks to win judicial office on the basis of false insinuations and demagogic utterances, commits an indignity against the office itself, and thereby shows himself unfit to be a judge.

The voters of Fulton County have a precious heritage in their right to select their judges. But it is a heritage which carries with it GREAT CIVIC RESPONSIBILITIES. Unless they select men of experience, of deep understanding, broad tolerance and profound legal knowledge, the courts of Georgia cannot be expected to function properly. No man is suited to be a judge if he lacks these qualities.

JUDGE A. L. (JACK) ETHERIDGE

Candidate to succeed himself as Judge of the Fulton Superior Court invites the voters to examine his record, and judge his qualifications, especially does he desire to have the record of his life—both personal and official—carefully scrutinized, in view of the intemperate and untrue insinuations which his opponent has seen fit to utter.

HERE IS THE RECORD—JUDGE FOR YOURSELF

Judge A. L. (Jack) Etheridge is—

- (1)—A Judge highly qualified by experience and temperament, and one who stands on his own merit.
- (2)—A Judge who has served faithfully, with fairness, courtesy and justice to all.
- (3)—A Judge who, after 12 years on the bench of the Civil Court, was elevated to the Superior Court in recognition of his distinguished judicial service, and who during his 15 months on the Superior Court, has established a record which entitles him to a full term.

What the LAWYERS Say About Judge Etheridge

At a recent poll of the Bar Association, the lawyers of Fulton County voted—AT A RATIO OF NINE TO ONE—that Judge Etheridge is better qualified than his opponent to hold the office of Judge of the Superior Court. These lawyers are thrown in daily contact with the Judges of Fulton County, and they KNOW, from experience, which are the most able, and which are incompetent.

What the NEWSPAPERS Say About Judge Etheridge

Next to the lawyers who practice in the courts, the best informed persons on the subject of judicial fitness are the newspapermen who daily observe the workings of the courts, and who are constantly in touch with the Judges who preside. Here is what they have said editorially about Judge Etheridge:

"Judge Etheridge has demonstrated deep understanding of the law and a profound realization of the meaning of judicial impartiality during his service in the Municipal Court (now Civil Court of Fulton County), and it is certain he brings to his new and more responsible position a highly developed ability as well as a deep desire to be of greater service to the people of Fulton. No man in local legal ranks could have been found better suited, by training, capacity and judicial temperament, for the position. There will be general approval over the choice."

—Editorial, Atlanta Constitution, April 28, 1939.

"Judge A. L. Etheridge's appointment to the Superior Court was cordially welcomed by the bar and the public at the time of its announcement and has grown in favor throughout the ensuing months of his service. He came to the office with ripe experience and tested ability, having previously served as judge of the Municipal, now the Civil Court of Fulton County. Legated in the law, diligent in duty, abounding in common sense and of irreproachable integrity, he has earned the community's confidence and esteem."

—Editorial, Atlanta Journal, May 15, 1940.

Isn't this sufficient answer to the claims and false insinuations of Judge Etheridge's opponent? The voters of Fulton County will show that they cannot be misled, by voting tomorrow for:

U. S. Red Cross Speeds Effort To Help British

Canteen Units Ordered To Feed Victims of Air Raids.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(P)—With the intensified German air bombardment of England, the American Red Cross is increasing its efforts to relieve the distress of civilians.

Norman Davis, Red Cross chairman, cabled instructions to London today that 12 mobile canteen units, each composed of eight vehicles, be bought immediately. The cost will be $65,000.

These canteen units—"chuck wagons"—will rush to areas where homes have been devastated and ladle out bowls of hot soup and cups of steaming coffee. Foreseeing the step-up in the air campaign and the increased civilian suffering, the American Red Cross has been concentrating recently on special preparations.

Tobacco Firms Deny

Price-Fixing Charges

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 9.—(P)—Major tobacco companies pleaded innocent today and asked dismissal of federal anti-trust charges on arraignment in United States district court.

Eight of the largest concerns, and 33 executives who also pleaded innocent, are accused of price fixing and monopoly.

Federal Judge H. Church Ford gave defense attorneys until September 23 to file briefs supporting their motions for dismissal.

Duke's Tenure Will Be Short, Reporter Says

Only Stepping-Stone to Bigger Things, Many Bahamians Believe.

By JOHN YOUNGER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(UP)—Neither the Duke and Duchess of Windsor nor the Bahamas think that the former British King's job as Governor of the Bahamas will last very long.

This is the conclusion reached after a month at Nassau, during which I "covered" activities of the Windsors, had many conversations with them and talked with innumerable residents and officials. The last time I spoke to the Duchess she went so far as to say flatly that she did not consider government house as "hers" but as an official residence. This fact, she said, underlay all her plans for its redecoration.

"I want to do this house so that the next Governor can move right in without having it redecored," she said. "It isn't as if it were my home—it is an official residence and I want to decorate it to harmonize with anyone's belongings."

The inference that her husband's job as Governor of the Bahamas is only temporary fits in with the general belief in Nassau that the Duke is only stepping off in the small capital on his way to bigger things.

But what these bigger things are is a matter of controversy. Many Bahamians believe that even while Governor of the islands, he will serve as an unofficial goodwill ambassador to America. The Duke himself denied this, though he stressed his feeling of friendship for the United States and expressed a wish to "be back soon."

Among the dignitaries attending was grave-faced General Higinio Morinigo, Estigarribia's minister of war, who was appointed president yesterday by a council of state.

Party Selects Brazil To See Sun's Eclipse

Scientists Will Travel 200 Miles Inland to Village.

When the moon totally covers the face of the sun near Patos, Brazil, on October 1, the National Bureau of Standards and the National Geographic Society of Washington, expect to have intricate photographic equipment set up directly on the line of eclipse.

Headed by Dr. Irvine C. Gardner, chief of the optical section of the bureau, a party of five will penetrate 200 miles into the interior of Brazil. From Recife on the coast, 1,500 pounds of apparatus will be trucked to the small village of Patos, five miles from the point of total eclipse.

The specially designed instruments will be rehearsed considerably in advance of October 1, synchronizing electrically the shutters and the motors of the cameras. There are two aluminum spectrographs with tubes 15 feet long, each capable of photographing a section of the sun's spectrum 40 inches in length.

In addition, two small telescope type corona cameras will catch the delicate halo around the sun which is only seen at periods of total eclipse.

Another important group of equipment, housed in an automobile trailer, will be used to measure the all-important radio reflecting layers of the upper atmosphere, caused when the moon briefly shuts off the sunlight. Dr. Gardner also will have the giant telescopic camera he previously used to picture eclipses in Russia and on the Canton Islands in the mid-Pacific.

These and other cameras, clocks, motors and batteries, will be used to take a complete colored motion picture of the five-minute eclipse; photographs of the "flash-spectrum" of the sun at the two instants when this phenomenon occurs; and photographs of the spectra of the corona; studies of sky brightness; sky radiation; sky spectra, and temperature and density changes in the atmosphere during totality.

Rome Real Estate Records Uptrend

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
ROME, Ga., Sept. 9.—Seven deeds representing real estate transactions totaling $58,621, largest amount in several weeks, were on file today in the office of Floyd County Clerk J. L. Jolly.

The gain in realty sales coincided with a general increase in business in the Rome area as fall trading gets under way. Numerous smaller deeds, involving amounts of less than $1,000 each, also were recorded during the past week, further boosting the volume of property transactions.

Largest deal recorded for the week was sale of the Nathaniel G. Foster plantation, a 1,052.2-acre tract on the Coosa river. This property was sold by Metropolitan Insurance Company to W. M. Clements for $25,000.

Another deal sold three tracts totaling 261 1-2 acres to the Berry schools for $13,000. McCall school sold to Dr. J. N. Cheney a brick store building and a dwelling on South Broad street for $11,621.

Jones Resolution Passed by House

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(P)—The house passed and sent to the senate today a resolution to permit Jesse H. Jones, federal loan administrator, to become secretary of commerce without giving up his present post.

During brief debate, Representative Knutson, Republican, Minnesota, expressed concern over "loading Jones down" with two positions and added: "We don't want to kill him. I think he is the outstanding man in this administration."

U. S. Group Procures Ship For Test on Refugees

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(P)—Marshall Field, president of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, said today a ship had been procured to sail to a foreign port, probably Irish, to bring children to this country.

There is as yet no assurance of safe conduct for the vessel from the German government. Field said, "but the committee's move is intended as a test case to ascertain whether or not such conduct will be granted."

The ship was not identified.

Eight States Ballot Today In Primaries

Senator Ashurst, Foe of Peace-Time Draft, Faces Arizona Test.

By The Associated Press.
Candidates for representatives in congress will be chosen today in primaries in eight states, Arizona, Colorado, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Vermont and Washington. They have a total of 47 seats.

Senatorial candidates also will be selected in six states during this week's primaries. Three of the seats in contest are held by Democrats, two by Republicans and one by a Farmer-Laborite. Senator Henry F. Ashurst, who opposed peace-time conscription, stakes his political future in the Arizona Democratic primaries today against three opponents who have made his opposition to the draft bill a major issue.

The Democratic primary was enlivened further by an intraparty contest over presidential electors favorable to President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie.

Failed to File.
Failure of the Democrats to file nominating petitions left the ballot without the names of Democratic presidential electors and led to a write-in campaign with the Willkie Democrats challenging three other sets of electors who are avowed Roosevelt supporters.

Should the Willkie slate win the Democratic electors would be pledged to cast Arizona's vote for the Republican candidate even though the Democrats should carry the state in November.

In Louisiana Governor Sam H. Jones today calls on Louisiana voters who ousted the Huey P. Long political dynasty last February for the first vote of confidence in a Democratic primary in which he has asked for defeat of Louisiana's entire delegation in the house of representatives.

Governor's Appeal.
The Governor's appeal to the voters has been that Louisiana for many years has been "misrepresented" in congress by stalwarts of the ousted Long machine, and that the reform must be completed by unseating these and Louisiana's two incumbent senators when they in turn come up for re-election.

A nominee they hope can win the governorship away from Republican Ralph L. Carr will be chosen in today's primary by Colorado Democrats.

Carr, who in 1938 became the first Republican elected to the Colorado governorship in 14 years, is opposed for renomination in his party.

The Democrats will choose between Secretary of State George E. Saunders, John A. Carroll, Denver district attorney, and George J. Knapp, Pueblo printer.

Washington state voters will give their answer to Democratic Governor Clarence D. Martin's bid for a third four-year term.

No Washington Governor has been elected three times, and Martin looked to the state's unusual primary election law which will permit voters to ballot for Democrats for some offices and for Republicans for others.

The bid of U. S. Senator Harrik Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite for 18 years, for nomination on the Republican senatorial ballot will highlight Minnesota's primary.

In South Carolina office-seekers who survived the first primary pepped up their supporters in last minute appeals last night in preparation for the second Democratic primary today.

Eleven state senators, 44 house members and a variety of county officers are to be nominated.

U. S. Acts to Speed Guards Training

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(P)—The War Department directed today that the National Guardmen called into federal service be concentrated "as soon as practicable" in their training centers.

Most of the troops are expected to arrive at camps within a week after being inducted into the army at their home armories on September 16. National Guard Bureau officials anticipate that all will be in camps within 10 days.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
MARIETTA, Ga., Sept. 9.—Prison Guard Frank Hopkins said two long-term Negro prisoners, Emanuel Miller and Douglas York, picked a lock and escaped from the Cobb county prison camp this morning.

Miller was serving an 18-to-20-year sentence for highway robbery, having been convicted in Cobb county. York was sent up from Spalding county for burglary and was serving a 12-to-15-year sentence.

Hopkins said the convicts were tracked by dogs a short distance from the camp, but that the trail was lost.

Optometrists Discuss School Youths' Vision

Defective Sight Blamed for Many Problems of Children.

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE.

"I'll wager a large sum I can take the first 25 persons wearing glasses that you pick up on the street and take them to the mountains or the plains and have them follow a routine which I will prescribe and the majority will come back with perfect vision as a group. That is, unless there is some organic disorder involving destruction of tissue."

This startling offer came yesterday afternoon from a hard-hitting optometrist with strong convictions concerning defective eyesight, Dr. A. M. Skeffington, of St. Louis, speaking before optometrists from the entire southeast gathered here to discuss children's eyesight and the methods of improving their vision as well as the inadequate tests now offered in many public schools.

"Juvenile delinquency, classroom failures, and many other problems confronting individuals and institutions working with American youth can be traced directly to defective eyesight," Dr. Skeffington told optometrists. "A child who can read charts may often be handicapped by varied visual defects in coping with book work. Usually the latter is condemned by teacher and parents as being lazy, dull, or stupid, they said.

The group concluded that schools must do more than merely order the student unable to cope with his studies to get glasses. The teachers should be instructed to watch for indications of faulty eyesight. Some of these include writing unevenly, tiring quickly while reading, suffering from headaches, reading in a twisted, unsteady position, and other symptoms.

Rate Victory Won by South, Hill Declares

Transportation Measure Passed, Solon Foresees Roosevelt Approval.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Senator Hill, Democrat, Alabama, declared in a statement today that the senate's completion of congressional action on the transportation bill constituted "a notable victory for the south and the southwest in their long fight against freight rate discrimination."

Hill predicted President Roosevelt would approve the measure. He said that while it had been primarily a measure for consolidation and reorganization of transportation systems, and to bring water carriers under federal control, it also would direct the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate discriminatory rates.

The latter provision, he said, was brought about by incorporation of part of the Hill-Ramspeck bill.

"The bill now provides for immediate investigation of rates," Hill said, "and calls for the termination of rate discriminations wherever they are found. The bill declares such discriminations, as between states and sections of the country, unlawful. It will mean that such discriminations must be terminated."

"The bill's economic effect will be to give the south and southwest a chance to enjoy the prosperity which their natural resources entitle them to have."

RED CROSS RESCUES.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 9.—(AP)—The Savannah Red Cross life saving corps hauled in 55 persons in danger of drowning during the Savannah Beach swim. Burt Williams, president of the unit, said 155 others received first-aid during the same period from the volunteer organization.

SCHOOL TESTS INADEQUATE—Optometrists from all over the southeast meeting here Sunday and yesterday debated the problem of school children's eyesight. Here, left to right, Dr. A. Scott Gibson, of Thomaston, secretary-treasurer of the Georgia State Association of Optometrists; Dr. Joel P. Smith, of LaGrange, second vice president of the state organization; Dr. A. M. Skeffington, of St. Louis, director of the Graduate Clinic Foundation for Research in Optometry; Dr. George V. Stephens, of Gainesville, first vice president, and Dr. Stephen Gernazian, of Atlanta, president of the Georgia organization.

RAF Raided Another City, Nazis Admit

Germans Threaten Attack on London '10 Times Worse.'

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—(Tuesday)—Squadrons of German planes roared away through the night toward England at 30 and 40-minute intervals, German authorities reported early today while threatening a bombardment 10 times worse than any London yet has undergone.

Three hundred Nazi planes participated in the Monday afternoon raids on the London area, despite unfavorable weather, they said, and clearing conditions favored the night attacks.

River City Bombed.

Authorities acknowledged a British raid during the night on the strongly-defended city of Wesermünde, at the mouth of the Weser river. Most of the attackers were driven off, they said, but gave no statements as to damage done.

London in particular and England in general will be the object of these intensified assaults, authorized Nazis declared, noting that the British themselves staged a "major attack" Sunday night on Hamburg.

The fact that Reichsmarschal Hermann Wilhelm Goering himself is directing the attack shows that it will be continuous and will increase in intensity, a Nazi spokesman said.

The Germans said the British unloaded their bombs on Hamburg during a three-hour attack only because they were unable to break through to Berlin—at any rate, Berlin had its second consecutive night of rest after a series of nights in air raid shelters.

There were other British night raids on Kiel and Luxemburg, and here, too, only residential sections were said by the Germans to have been hit.

Commenting on the attack on Hamburg, Europe's largest port, where military objectives were declared unscathed, the Berliner Zeitung asserted:

"England To Be Taught."

"Apparently the British night pirates, despite the destructive German reprisals, have not had enough. The further actions of the German air force will teach England definitely that Adolf Hitler's words are being converted into deeds."

The Germans declared that Britain's pursuit pilots have been "decimated and worn out from the continuous stream of German raiders and are avoiding battle where possible."

"They are putting half-prepared student fliers behind the sticks of fighter planes while their bomber pilots are being re-educated as fighters," one observer added.

Contradicting British reports that only military objectives were hit at Hamburg, the Germans said British bombs fell in a densely populated residential section, destroying 30 buildings, including some apartment houses. Despite the heavy property damage, only four deaths were reported.

German pilots conceded that British anti-aircraft fire repeatedly rocked their planes and sent many home with as many as 30 punctures, but they insisted they were getting through with such heavy bombs that the explosions shook their craft as high as 12,000 feet.

U.S. Destroyers Taken Over by British Crews

Union Jack Replaces Stars and Stripes in Canadian Port.

AN EAST CANADIAN PORT, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The Union Jack replaced the Stars and Stripes today with a minimum of ceremony in the transfer of the first group of 50 American over-age destroyers to British command.

American sailors who brought the destroyers to this port hauled down their colors and marched ashore after a bug sounded "to the colors." A moment later British tars went aboard and hoisted their flag.

Captains' pennants were run up simultaneously on the mainmasts, indicating the destroyers—traded for western hemisphere defense bases—were actually in commission of the royal navy and ready for war action.

Tobin Calls for Purge Of 'Racketeers' in Union

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Daniel J. Tobin, leader of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, American Federation of Labor, today called for a purge of "racketeers" in the union.

Delegates to the brotherhood's 14th convention sat in an auditorium built by the Daughters of the American Revolution and heard Tobin urge changes in the union's constitution to deal with what he called "miserable, dishonest and unprincipled scoundrels who have used our organization for criminal purposes."

AT NAVY AIR SCHOOL.

LAGRANGE, Ga., Sept. 9.—Cecil Robert Patterson has entered the aviation machinists' school at the naval air station in Norfolk, Va., for the regular course of instruction. He enlisted in the navy in June and was admitted to the school on September 1.

Excess Profit Bill's Revision Nearly Finished

Last-Minute Changes in Measure Materially Broadens Exemptions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The senate finance committee virtually completed today its revision of the house-approved excess profits tax bill, with last-minute changes materially broadening exemptions in the measure.

Chairman Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, announced that the committee would recess until Wednesday to give legislative experts time to draft the numerous amendments voted by the committee. He forecast that the measure would reach the senate floor by Wednesday afternoon.

The committee voted to boost from $5,000 to $10,000 the amount of profits in excess of "normal" which a corporation would be permitted to earn free from the 25 per cent excess profits schedules provided by the measure.

Members said this change was expected to relieve more than 20,000 corporations from any excess profits tax, although all corporations would be reached by the 3.1 per cent normal tax rate increase proposed by the committee. Committee advisers estimated the change would cut revenue from the bill by $19,000,000.

The committee reconsidered its previous action and eliminated a proposed 10 per cent special levy on that portion of excess profits flowing from defense contracts.

RAF in Action, Britain Safe, Say Neutrals

British Held Hurting Germans More Than Nazis Will Admit.

By EDWARD E. BOMAR.

London's suffering citizenry might be cheered to know that the mounting ferocity of the Nazi air war has failed thus far to shake the grim optimism with which neutral military men as well as their own leaders view the outlook for Britain.

The tragic toll of hundreds killed and homes destroyed in the metropolis, along with the reports of "superbombs" and Berlin's threats to intensify the raids "tenfold," have obscured but have not greatly altered the substantial basis for British hopes of ultimate victory.

The same American authorities who said privately last month that the odds were even or slightly favored Britain are unwilling yet to shorten them.

From available evidence the defending Royal Air Force remains formidable though weakened. It appears to be inflicting blows that hurt more than Berlin is willing to admit, and British morale continues high.

More important to Britain's outlook that the destruction of huge areas of London are the preparations to provide the R. A. F. with adequate bases beyond London to replace those damaged in the southeast.

It is from these camouflaged, gun-ringed and presumably underground bases that the defending fighters appear now to be taking off in greatest numbers to combat raiders.

Geography, numbers and several other factors make it impossible for the time being for British bombers to inflict the damage that crowded England suffers, but it is fairly certain that their blows are harder than Berlin will acknowledge.

Britons, in contemplating the immediate outlook for London, have need of the stolid determination for which John Bull is known. Madrid and Chungking showed, however, how a determined urban people can withstand punishment.

As long as the R. A. F. remains in action, as long as the 1,000 or more anti-aircraft guns protecting the metropolitan area keep firing and the balloon barrages remain aloft, London is a long way from the fate of helpless Rotterdam, Warsaw and Barcelona.

Britain Extends Pilot Age Limit

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The British air ministry appealed sternly for more pilots, machine-gunners and wireless operators to man the mounting production of planes which will mean life or death for the world's largest empire.

The age limit for pilots was raised from 28 years to 30 and that for the others remained at 32. The air ministry first set the age limit up to 37, but later announced this was a clerical error.

URGENT ALCOHOL BAN. MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Sept. 9.—(AP)—The sixth district Women's Christian Temperance Union adopted a resolution urging that alcoholic drinks be barred in canteens, training camps and adjacent territories. Members proposed that defense plans include provisions against such beverages.

Nazi Plane Leaves Smoke Trail As If Setting Stage for Attack

By G. H. P. ANDERSON.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—From the rooftop observation post of the Associated Press building, shaken periodically by the heavy blasts of Nazi bombs, I watched tonight the firelit unfolding of the German air raid.

At first, like a small boy drawing the curtain in some summer barn theater, a single high-flying plane traced a trail of white smoke across the silvery sky three minutes after the air raid warnings sounded.

The smoke, possibly a marker for attack, lay edgewise in a lazy arc.

Drama Begins.

Then, suddenly, an anti-aircraft shell flashed into the southwest; there was a bomb thud in the northwest, followed by the faint sound of gunfire; the drone of planes grew louder.

The night's drama had begun. Momentarily, silence fell. A dog could be heard barking in the distance, while a horse clattered over cobblestones near by. Then an ambulance clanged for the right-of-way.

A scattering of lone planes circled about, dropping incendiary bombs at opposite points of the compass in an obvious effort to set beacon fires such as guided the raiders Saturday and Sunday nights.

Another bigger plane sped overhead, seemingly in a high-powered, steady climb, with a sound like that of a power-saw cutting through tough English oak.

A dozen bombs fell at scattered points. Several planes came over central London, and the anti-aircraft guns opened up again. Several bombs dropped at some distance.

Another lone bomber dropped a "Molotov breadbasket" not far away.

Named for Russian.

This device, a big container that discharged many little incendiary bombs, was named by the Finns, who first felt its horror in the war with Soviet Russia last winter, and named it for the Soviet premier-foreign minister.

The big bomb opened with a blue-white flash, almost silent. Then its cargo of small incendiary bombs spread far and wide.

I dodged down from the roof when a cluster of incendiaries whistled past. Suddenly five

Girl, Trapped In Bomb Ruins 15 Hours, Dies

Hospital Worker Tells Rescuers, 'It Won't Be Long Now.'

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—For 15 hours rescuers labored to free a young woman trapped in the debris of a bombed tenement.

Fully conscious, she murmured to the workers, "It won't be long now."

Just then sirens screamed a new warning. The girl gasped and died. The workers said the shock killed her.

The young woman was Barbara Thomas, 25, massage student of a London hospital. Her cries early this morning brought rescue workers who gave her food, a pain-killing injection and oxygen, and cut through a wall two feet thick to free her. Then they had to cut away the iron bedstead that held her.

An hour before she died a hospital official declared she was "in excellent spirits."

ATLANTA, GA., SEPTEMBER 10, 1940.

Election Inefficiency

The Atlanta League of Women Voters, in charging that the city election of last Wednesday was conducted with gross inefficiency, merely focused public attention on a situation that was familiar to everyone who marked a ballot in the election. The League statement correlated and presented in formal manner the evidence that hundreds of people in the city knew to be true.

Mayor-elect Roy LeCraw has promised that the city will have voting machines, eliminating confusion and making irregularities impossible, by the time the 1944 primary and election come around. Why not have them for 1942? If good in 1944, surely they will be as desirable in 1942.

The only stumbling block in the way of acquiring the voting machines is the matter of cost. There were 38 precincts in last Wednesday's election and, allotting one machine to each precinct, this would involve an outlay of $38,000.

It should be possible, however, for the city and county to purchase and use the voting machines jointly. City and county primaries are not held on the same date, and the machines used by one could just as easily be used by the other. Thus the cost should be reduced by half, insofar as the city is concerned.

The lesson of last Wednesday's primary should not be forgotten. There was, undoubtedly, disgraceful impropriety in the manner of conducting the voting, and counting the votes, at many of the precincts. Secrecy of the ballot was practically impossible. Precinct managers were tired out after 12 hours on duty, even before they began the arduous task of vote counting. Granting that there was no intentional manipulation of the count, it is still evident that, under the physical conditions prevailing, it was practically impossible to secure an absolutely correct result.

Let us have voting machines by all means. At the earliest possible date. And let us, likewise, not forget the undesirable conditions that featured last week's election and, with or without voting machines, see to it there shall be no repetition.

A current sun spot is so large the earth could easily be thrown into it. If worse comes to worst, it is something to remember.

Southern Progress

Announcement that the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company has placed an order for 18 Diesel-electric locomotives, again turns attention to the recent rapid improvement in train service for the south.

Only recently it became known that, by the use of such Diesel locomotives for switching here, Atlanta's ancient problem of the smoke that comes from the rail canyon through the heart of the city, will be solved.

For several years streamlined trains, Diesel powered for at least part of the journey, have run between this city and Washington and New York. One by one the southern rail lines are modernizing their equipment, with the result that the passenger of today who has, perhaps, preferred other modes of travel of recent years, is pleasantly astonished at the improved railroad accommodations.

The rapid progress of the south, industrially and economically, has been the factor which has made it possible for the roads to give us these improvements. They needed no urging, but were themselves anxious to secure the better equipment as promptly as it could be constructed and as conditions warranted.

It is great for us all to see this visible evidence of a truth that is inescapable. That is, that remarkable as southern progress has been, achievements of the past will, in years soon to come, appear as nothing to the south that will then be.

Winner of a beauty contest for lifeguards measures 6 feet 4 in height and 42 inches around the chest. Introducing high, wide and handsome.

Tunney comes out for Willie; Jack Dempsey declares for Roosevelt. As the late Arthur Brisbane was wont to observe, a gorilla could lick the four of them.

Kapok

Hidden inconspicuously in the news from Washington relating to the national defense program, is an item which should be of exceptional interest to the south.

It is stated that among other imported materials, of which reserve stocks are sought for army and navy needs, is kapok.

Now kapok is a raw material something like cotton. It comes from a tree known as the "silk-cotton" tree, a large growth to be found in Central and South America, as well as in Java and other eastern tropics.

This tree sometimes grows as high as 100 feet. Large, yellow flowers appear before the new leaves come and, as the flowers fall, they leave large pods which burst open when mature. Inside the pods is the kapok, a delicate, cotton-like material. Too short in fiber to be used in the textile industry, kapok is used for stuffing cushions and other upholstery.

It may be that the army and the navy have other uses for kapok than mere upholstery. But the point should be made that, while kapok fiber is unsuited for textiles, cotton fiber is suited either to textiles or to cushion stuffing.

While the cotton states of the south struggle under the burden of too great production, while there are millions of bales of cotton, carrying government loans, stored in warehouses all over this country, doesn't it seem somewhat foolish for the army and navy to insist on kapok stuffing for cushions, when the cotton surplus could be drastically reduced by using the domestic-produced fiber? They must use a lot of cushions, pillows and mattresses in the army and navy, if the government desire for a reserve supply of kapok is not exaggerated.

And, while it is desirable to encourage foreign trade, most of the kapok imports today come from Java. Which is by no manner of interpretation in the zone of the American hemisphere.

On a night lately when there was no bombing, a resident of Kent (England) found he couldn't sleep. Smoking a loaded cigar should help to pass the time.

Warring on Disease

Action of the State Board of Regents in sanctioning a plan whereby the University of Georgia Medical School and State Board of Health may co-operate to provide Georgia physicians with a two-week course in the treatment of venereal disease is another important step in society's fight against one of its most highly dreaded enemies.

Long permitted to ravage unchecked because of a combination of fear, ignorance, and the false niceties of polite discourse, venereal disease has taken a monstrous toll of our strength and of our well-being. Eight per cent of the whites and 50 per cent of the Negroes contract some venereal disease at some time in their lives. In Georgia, intelligent estimate finds over 300,000 persons with syphilis alone. Annually, about 20,000 new cases occur. Ten per cent of the population of our insane asylums is there for syphilis of the brain. Georgia spends approximately $150,000 annually to support these victims.

Since adequate treatment and early diagnosis are essential to control and cure, delay of treatment or the consultation of quacks is tragically in error. With a more highly enlightened populace we may hope to slash vigorously into the toll of these diseases.

Georgia already has over 100 free clinics which make treatment available to the poor; but more than half the counties have no clinic at all.

Before we can completely control the diseases, we must have the greatest co-operation of employers, blood tests for expectant mothers, free clinics in every community, a wider information on the cause and cure of the diseases, and a heightened public awareness of the penalties of neglect.

A SHORT SERMON

(From The Charleston News and Courier.)

The News and Courier holds that political contests in South Carolina, in Charleston, should be conducted with fairness, justice, honesty.

The News and Courier holds that a political contest in Charleston should be conducted not less honorably than a game of cards or a game of baseball is played by gentlemen.

The News and Courier holds that no ideal of honor is too high for Charleston in carrying on its political affairs.

The News and Courier holds that to steal an election or to profit from a stolen election is no more respectable than to steal a sheep or to profit by the theft of a sheep.

The News and Courier holds that honesty in elections is more important to the people, the poor and the rich, especially the poor, than honesty in any game.

These are old, trite, simple things to say. The News and Courier holds that the proof of their truth is that no man or woman will publicly deny them.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

ROOSEVELT CHANGES HIS METHODS WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—This campaign is the first great political venture in which the President has ever played a lone hand. No busy brain-trusters cook up his speeches, and eagerly check references to confuse the opposition. No James A. Farley tunes the party machinery until the entire Democratic organization hums with power. No secret service men cross and recross the continent, laying out the routes of political grand progresses down to the last brief platform appearance at the lowliest whistle stop.

Instead of his usual campaigning activities, in short, the President is artfully presenting himself to the public as the busy leader of a great nation, too preoccupied with his innumerable duties even to answer his opponent. Of course, behind the scenes, he is quietly directing the campaign's course. The speaking trips of Vice Presidential candidate Henry A. Wallace have been planned with him, and he has checked over all major Wallace orations. The doings of the new Democratic national chairman, Ed Flynn, and of his less conspicuous but even more active co-adjuster, Ed Kelly, of Chicago, are supervised from the White House. Where local situations need attention, the President attends to them, although on nothing like the lavish scale of 1936.

But the contrast between the present and the past is still surprisingly sharp. Furthermore, one aspect of the changes at the White House may prove highly significant in the future.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW? So far as can be discovered, for example, an accepted presidential amanuensis no longer exists. The celebrated team of Corcoran and Cohen is not on the job. Cohen is giving most of his time to his position at the Interior Department, with only occasional forays into other fields. Corcoran had hardly returned from his honeymoon before he left on an extended vacation, after which it is probable that he will resign from the government. Judge Samuel J. Rosenman, of New York, the senior member of the club of presidential speech-writers, is still consulted on major utterances, but is not ensconced at the White House.

Of the other club members—Moley, Johnson, Richberg, Stanley High, Rex Tugwell, Adolf Berle—all are either in bad standing or have other tasks to do. The President himself writes his own speeches, using memoranda on technical matters from the departments, and taking advice from his secretariat, his propaganda expert, and his speech-writer, Harry C. Hopkins.

The extent of change is immediately visible when this situation is compared to the elaborate arrangements prevailing in 1932 and 1936. In 1932, the brain-trusters of that forgotten era, Moley, Berle, Tugwell and Johnson, inhabited a secret suite at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York, where they received all "Democrats with ideas," hammered out policy, and wrote speeches. In 1936, Roosevelt commanded a difficult team, composed of Corcoran, Cohen and Stanley High, who labored night and day at the White House. They drafted every Roosevelt campaign utterance, from the most trivial five-minute expression of good-will to the famous declaration at Madison Square Garden that "we have just begun to fight."

THE CABINET TAKES OVER However much art there may be in the President's parade of lack of interest in the campaign, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that the President's changed methods mean a change in the man himself. In 1932 and 1936, he was really dependent on such men as Moley and Tugwell, Corcoran and Cohen. A set of new advisers, deeply interested in promoting new programs, was established at the White House by each of the President's previous national campaigns.

Now the former advisers are all either discredited or retired. Hopkins, Mellett and the one or two others like them are no more independent of the President in ideas than his own arms are in motion. Their relationship to him was well expressed in Hopkins' explanation to a friend that he had remained close to the President for so long because he talked of light matters whenever his chief seemed disinclined to discuss an important topic. And there is no sign of the appearance of new men to inherit the positions of the Corcorans and Cohens of the past.

In truth, the President's changed system of campaigning implies a change in his system of running the government. The chief government officials were once less influential than the New Dealers working behind the scenes. Now, however, the cabinet is of far more importance. The problems of the departments are largely settled by direct dealing with the department heads. Even the national defense program, in which certain New Dealers once wished to play a part, is being handled by the Defense Commission without interference except from the President himself. Possibly, if Wendell L. Willkie seems to take the lead, a new crop of amanuenses and advisers will be raised up to answer him. But for the present it seems likely that, if there are four more years of Roosevelt, they will be pretty different from the last seven.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

You Just Can't Brew.

Mr. Brewster Manning, of the news department of this Georgia institution, recently entered an eating establishment in this city, seeking a ham sandwich for the sustenance of his body and brain. His appetite was calling for a simple ham sandwich, that and nothing more.

Address himself to the waiter in what he fondly imagined to be convincing voice, our Mr. Manning requested:

"One ham sandwich, please. Two plain white bread, please. A slice of good ham snugly nestled between. No lettuce on the side, I beg of you. No pickles, whole or sliced. No mustard, mayonnaise, condiments or what have you. Plain, white bread, untoasted. I do not want a handful of potato chips around and upon my sandwich. Plain, white bread, ham sandwich, unadorned."

So the waiter brought him a sandwich with mayonnaise on the bread, with a dab of coleslaw on one side of the plate, two pickles on the other, a foundation of lettuce leaves and sufficient potato chips to form an eruption over it all.

As Mr. Manning dug his ham sandwich out from the conglomeration and tried to ignore the mayonnaise, he was heard to murmur, with resignation, that simple yet poignant phrase, "You can't win."

Which Reminded—

Which incident reminded me of the coffee served in most English restaurants.

To begin with, it is not good coffee, even in the bean. Then they make it so strong it is fearful to drink unless diluted. And their method of dilution is to pour the cup half-full of boiling milk. The result may best be left to imagination. Or, untouched, at your place on table or counter.

Upon entering a food emporium in England it is my custom to attract the attention of the waitress, if possible, in some unusual and arresting way. Then, when she is fully concentrated upon my words, I try to explain that I'd like a cup of black coffee, only partially full. I would enjoy a small pitcher of hot water, on the side, and a small pitcher of cream, cold. And no sugar.

And, in due course, she would place before me a cup full of half-and-half, half that super-strong coffee and half hot milk, with a spoonful of sugar already stirred.

Those English waitresses believe they know best how you should drink your coffee and they're not going to permit any foreign nonsense about it.

One afternoon last summer I searched for a place which I had thought, as a boy and young man, served really good coffee. I found it, still doing business at the old stand. And I took my wife there—in, promising a really good cup of coffee.

When the usual result came about my wife, who had witnessed the coffee tragedy many times within the week or two, burst into tears. It was too much.

Ham Sandwich On the Pier.

I rather wish Mr. Manning had been with us one afternoon at Southampton, England. We had been out to the end of the pier, across the beach. We had been entranced with the gorgeous flower gardens and the scenery generally. We had reveled in the fresh salt breeze blowing in from the Irish Sea. As a result of all these things, we had gone an hour or so before leaving the pier.

Being hungry, we entered the first place we saw where they served food. It was a little tea shop, right at the pier head.

We ordered ham sandwiches and tea.

The ham was all right. And so was the bread. And the tea was excellent. But I give you my word, Mr. Manning, one of those ham sandwiches, entire, didn't make an average—even a polite—mouthful for any man. They were the most minute ham sandwiches I ever saw. Smaller even than those to be found at a woman's bridge-tea.

Realizing that it would require at least a dozen to satisfy my hunger, and being ashamed to order, from the comely waitress, one-twelfth gross, I swallowed the atomic sample, ate a couple of fancy cakes and drank my tea. Then saw to it we had an early dinner, that day.

But there were no potato chips. In fact, I'd have welcomed a double fist full.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Friday, September 10, 1915:

"Washington, Sept. 9.—Germany, in its note to the United States on the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic by a submarine, declares the German government is unable to acknowledge any obligation to grant indemnity for the loss of American lives."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Wednesday, September 10, 1890:

"The Atlanta Street Railway Company will, at an early date, do away with the mule motor and substitute for it electricity."

Eggs Flavored to Order

Eggs may be given almost any flavor, according to experimenters in England, and one may order raspberry, coffee, lemon, tomato or other tasty "hen fruit." Just mix the flavor with the hen's food. The possibility was discovered by Mrs. Horace Boot, of Maidenhead, when her breakfast edges tasted of eucalyptus and she found her wandering hens eating eucalyptus leaves.

FAIR ENOUGH

Hard To Understand

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—George Spelvin, American, finds it more and more difficult to understand his oldest son, the one they call Dummy, who has very positive ideas, most of them in conflict with the old man's.

Last night, for example, Dummy said the whole trouble with the world was the greedy rich.

"All they think about," he said, "is their profits and having a good time."

"Well," the old man said, "and what do you think about?"

"Well," the Dummy said, "I don't think about profits because I am not an exploiter, but if you mean I like to tear around a little and lap up a saucer of toddy, why, that's all right. After all, a human and you don't live but only once."

"How long has it been since you had a job?" the old man asked.

"About a year," the Dummy said, "and that is just the trouble. The dirty rich are so greedy that they won't give you a job, and I am a member of the lost generation without any market for my talents."

"What are your talents?" the old man asked.

"Salesman," said the Dummy. "But nobody has any money to spend because the rich aren't putting out, so I can't make a quarter."

"Dummy," the old man said, "you ought to know that the more money they sell the more profits they get, so why would they want to close up business and cut off all those wages?"

"But you take my case, for instance," the Dummy said. "If they would pay me a decent salary I would spend the dough for a car and probably get married and even buy a house. As long as they pay me a good salary I will keep on sending it in, because, paw, you know I am a rough man on a dollar, and the first thing you know we will have prosperity again."

"But you said the whole trouble is that the rich are so greedy about profits," the old man said, "and now you say nobody has any dough to spend, so it is a cinch the rich can't make any profits not selling anything. Why don't you pull yourself together?"

"The rich put their money into tax-exempt bonds," said the Dummy. "Don't you ever listen to the radio? They buy government bonds and close up their business and live on the fat of the land without paying taxes."

What Would You Do?

"If you had a thousand bucks," the Dummy said, "I would throw a party like I bet you never saw because, like I said, you only live once and it is here today and gone tomorrow. But I can understand why some common people would buy government bonds just to play safe, but I am thinking of the rich. They shouldn't be allowed to stick it away in government bonds."

"Why not?" Mr. Spelvin demanded. "If the government don't want the rich dough why do they borrow it? Do you ever hear of them refusing to borrow a million bucks from one guy and borrowing a fin from 200,000 little guys, instead?"

"Well," said the Dummy, "you can argue yourself crazy, but I am telling you the day is coming."

"Why day?" the old man demanded.

"The day is coming," the Dummy said, "when the government will trick those rich bums. The government will tax the ears of their horses and stocks so they will lend it all to the government instead. And then the government will refuse to pay them back and they will be out of luck and guys like me will all get jobs with the government, and boy, will we go to town!"

"Out of the mouths of dummies," said George Spelvin, American.

No Money To Spend

Twelve of the artists whose work was featured on this year's Royal Academy in London selected Rae Fuller for their model because 22-year-old Rae seems to bring better Academy luck than anybody. For four years she has headed the list of Academy appearances. She also was the model for the mermaid in a bronze group by Charles Wheeler. A. R. A. planned for Trafalgar Square. In private life she is Mrs. Edward Sackett, wife of an engineer, and enjoys working in her garden.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

REGISTRATION LISTS A worker in the second ward, Precinct E, reports that by midday approximately 100 would-be voters in last Wednesday's city primary were turned away because their names were not on the registration lists. They all had registered.

Most of these had time to go home, find their tax receipts, and return to the polling place and demand to be allowed to exercise their right of suffrage. They were, of course, refused. The election officials could do nothing else.

As story after story comes in, it becomes obvious our registration books must be in a lamentable condition. It would seem a simple matter for the registration office to take the daily reports of deaths and keep the lists purged of those who have gone on to their rewards. Yet the bond workers were able to have purged a great many names of persons who long had been dead. That they did not get all of them removed goes without saying.

In talking with some of the renominated city officials yesterday, they declared they believed at least 3,000 names could be purged from the registration lists.

The permanent registration law is a good one. But it does mean the registration office must do some work beyond the mere acceptance of names for the lists.

There is ample time to keep the lists in shape. Nothing seems to be done about them, beyond the mere acceptance of names, and that with at least some, if not a great deal, of inaccuracy, until a bond election is scheduled. Workers then manage to take to the office the names of some dead persons and have the names removed.

The daily newspapers publish the lists of deaths each day and as far as these are concerned the registration office could keep the list purged of these by a simple checking of the published death lists.

COMPLACENCY RULES Mayor-elect Roy LeCraw has one very effective argument in opposing a recount. He was ready to show the committee that at least 17 boxes had not been sealed, as required by law, but had been left unsealed overnight.

This is but one example of the several law violations reported. When these unsealed boxes are added to the reports of candidates being allowed to count votes; to the reports of ballots being taken out of the polling place and counted beneath neon lights on the sidewalk; to reports of lost and missing ballots; to reports of unsavory and criminal characters being allowed in polling places; when reports of at least more than 100 voters being disfranchised because of errors in the registration office, it is obvious we need to take up the slack.

This is not in the interest of a single candidate. Those issues already are decided. They really are of secondary importance.

What is of supreme importance is that an alarmingly large number of persons today have lost faith in the ballot. And in elections. They have become entirely cynical about elections.

Such a primary as we have just had confirms their cynicism. It is of supreme importance those interested enough to register not have their rights destroyed by carelessness. It is most important that elections be conducted so as to assure the faith and confidence of those voting.

We have become so complacent that when there is any criticism of public officials, too many of them look for a political reason or ascribe criticism to a "sour grapes" attitude. This is disturbing. Surely there can be no objection to asking for a better job in the registration office; in the facilitating of the physical act of voting and in the conduct of elections.

Too many persons already have lost faith in them not to correct conditions.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS The League of Women Voters does an outstanding service in presenting their impartial reports on city, county and state candidates. Newspapers of Atlanta have published them as a public service.

Some effort was made to censor some of their reports by friends of some candidates whose records included indictments and one plea of guilty and one admission of perjury. The records were not censored but were presented as given. These reports are of unusual value and will become increasingly important in their increasingly important in their influence on elections.

Those feminine citizens of Atlanta who have not looked into the league, might do so with benefit. It is not at all a group of reformers or of career women. The average housewife would find the league and its meetings stimulating and beneficial.

It would be enormously beneficial if the league could obtain several thousand members. The organization of each ward would be beneficial.

We must recognize a cold truth. It is that, until the League of Women Voters came along, there did not exist a single organization interested in politics which did not have an ax to grind. This league has no ax to grind and no motive except that of good government.

Those women who are interested in voting and who want to become more intelligent voters, would do well to join the league. It is the one organization offering the most hope for better government.

A Fable About a Mother's Love That Had The Wrong Effect

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

When Ma Jones was widowed, she possessed a big cattle ranch, two infant sons, and a great capacity for doing as she pleased, regardless.

The infant sons were as different as day and night, and the treatment they received differed as much.

Curley was a little beauty. His head was covered with golden ringlets; his body was white and straight and beautiful; his eyes were big and blue and shaded by long dark lashes.

Blackie, the younger son, was plain homely. His brick-red hair was stringy and bleached at the end. His nose was pug and his face was a mass of freckles. He was knock-kneed and skinny.

Ma kept Curley done up in pale blue ribbons and never let him out of her sight. He was never allowed near the horses. If he went anywhere, he rode on the front seat of the car with his mother—carefully protected from a draft. His diet was watched as closely as an invalid's. And he was the prettiest little thing you ever saw—if you like them a little fat.

Ma wasn't interested in Blackie and didn't pretend to be. So the kid played where he pleased and things happened to him.

He fell from a hayloft; a horse stepped on him; he was struck by a rattler and lingered near death for weeks; he learned Spanish cuss words from the cowhands, and at the age of four his diet consisted of beans, biscuit, beefsteak and coffee, for he ate with the hired help by preference. He was so thin you could count his ribs through his shirt, but at the age of 10 he could ride anything that wore hair and every ounce of him was rawhide.

That was the year the bandits came through and carried off Ma and the two boys to be held for ransom.

In the wild dash for the border, the captives were scratched by mesquite, burned by the sun and tortured by thirst. They drank creek water when they could get it and ate corn meal cakes and beans. By nightfall of the third day, Curley had a high fever.

The ransom money came too late.

Sitting in the sheriff's office back home, Ma told the story of her capture. "They killed my darling boy," she moaned.

"What did they do to him," asked the sheriff, "that wasn't done to this little fellow you call Blackie?"

"Why, nothing," said Ma, "but Curley was delicate. He couldn't stand the hardship."

"Was it the bandits," growled the sheriff, "who made him delicate and robbed him of a chance to survive?"

"No man can fool those with whom he comes in daily contact for years. I believe that those of you who have no personal knowledge of the qualifications of John A. "Citizens should vote for a person to fill the important office of Solicitor-General who has invincible determination, the formation of a righteous purpose, and then the pursuit of that purpose and duty, despite all of the obstacles that the unscrupulous may raise. ## Pulse of The Public

COMPLAINS ABOUT POLLING PLACES.

Editor, Constitution: Please accept my congratulations on the timely editorials in connection with the deplorable conditions surrounding the polling places in Atlanta.

Usually I vote in a garage at Little Five Points but this time it was in a drug store at corner Mayson and DeKalb avenue. The former was bad enough but in a small congested drug store trying to carry on its business, with one set of officials trying to carry on the voting for officials in front of the store and another group in the rear trying to carry on voting for bond issue it was just about as hopeless a mess as I ever saw.

I finally sat down at a table with two or three others to make out my ballots. Absolutely no privacy. And I had to stand in line twice to get my ballots which seems to me gross waste of money having two sets of officials.

It may be against the law but I see no reason why the voting can't be done in schoolhouses. Most of them equipped with auditoriums but in those without classrooms would be ideal. Schools are supposed to be located most conveniently and even if the corridors are used they would be more suitable than a congested drug store or automobile garage.

I have been in Atlanta for 20 years and it appears that instead of conditions improving they are getting worse, insofar as polling places are concerned. It is true we are now free from the "pests" who try to influence you around the polls, yet at the poll where I voted as I saw an automobile with large letters painted on it saying vote for Mr. — standing within 30 feet of the spot where I voted. There were police around too.

The voters of Atlanta are going to thank you for your interest and let's hope something will be accomplished. There certainly has been a lot of "smut" connected with this election and let's hope the next one will be more sensibly handled.

FEELS POOR POLLS DEFEATED BONDS.

Editor, Constitution: "One Word More" regarding the way the Democratic executive committee of Atlanta provided for the election on September 4th was good. However, it did not go far enough. Did the committee use all the money assessed from candidates for the rental of space, hiring of helpers, etc., in this election, and if so, how much was spent for rentals and how much for the clerks, managers, and so on.

As I understand it, however, the city administration was responsible for providing facilities, managers and clerks for the bond election and that was a much poorer job than that of the committee you so justly criticize. Actually the city administration lost the bonds for every cause presented.

It happened this way: the Democratic executive committee in the political election secured fairly available and convenient spaces for its purposes and had several clerks and managers at each polling place. The city administration secured very poorly located and inconvenient polling places, even where both were in the same building and provided three people to look after the place.

In my own precinct the political election was held in the front room of an old residence now used for a garage. It had a street entrance, six workers and four booths. The bond election was held by three workers in a back room of the same building reached through a dirty entry and hall. I had been in the building many times but there was nothing to indicate the bond election was being held in it and if I had not been interested enough to inquire I would not have found where it was being held. I am told that similar conditions existed all over the city.

The result was that while plenty of people went to the polls as evidenced by the vote in the mayor's race, to carry all the bonds, it was made so inconvenient for them to vote in the bond election that they simply rushed on to their businesses and the bonds lost out. Had the additional 2,000 and more who voted in the political races had the same facilities furnished in the bond election enough additional ones would have voted for the bonds to carry them.

Atlanta. T. J. BRYAN.

AGAINST NUMBERED BALLOTS.

Editor, Constitution: Again, as many times in the past, "One Word More" has put the writing finger upon a sore spot in our way of doing things in Atlanta.

In your strictures regarding the lack of propriety in conducting elections, you state that "the place to begin good government is with the ballot itself." I have often wondered why it was necessary to have each ballot numbered so that the part torn off bears a corresponding number and a record made in a book of the self-same number. It is possible to preserve sanctity and secrecy of ballot if it is feasible to have any individual citizen's vote traced through this double source, assuming that anyone or group might be interested in how the citizens vote? Presumably that is why it is done.

Farm Plan Held Defense Bulwark

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 9.—(AP)

R. L. Vansant, of Athens, director of the Farm Security Administration, told about 200 farm and home supervisors gathered here today from four south Georgia districts the FSA rehabilitation loan program was "the first line of defense for thousands of farm families."

In the event of spreading of the war, he declared a united and satisfied farm population would squelch any Fifth Column activities aimed at this country.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Thousands of Georgia boys and girls are off to school again, some for the first time; some for their last year in high school; some away to college for the first time, some for their final year in the university.

It is always a solemnizing occasion when the youth of a community start into another school year. One's heart is deeply moved to contemplate the scene—a scene picturing sacrifice on the part of many parents to give their children advantages they never knew—a scene bringing opportunity to many who scarcely appreciate its meaning.

Once again we may well give thanks that we live in a land where an effort is made to give educational advantage to every child—where the conviction is deep and abiding that democracy is a workable principle and that education is fundamental.

Once again we may well give thanks for men and women who have devoted their lives to the finest possible expression of training for youth. The school teacher holds a very high and honored position in the thought of our people. We trust them to train our children, believing in their ability and their purpose.

I like these lines, written by Cortlandt W. Sayers:

For a schoolhouse anywhere

I send up a silent prayer:

Christ, great Teacher, bless this place;

On it shed Thy love and grace.

Teach the teachers; let them see

That they shape earth's destiny.

Home and church and school—

these three

Carry on Thy ministry.

As from Thee comes growth of seed,

So to Thee we bring our need.

What to plant, and how to sow—

That is what we pray to know.

Let schools be in Thy pure sight

Bethlehems of truth and light.

For a schoolhouse anywhere

I send up a silent prayer.

It is my conviction that such a prayer will ascend from countless hearts this week and throughout the year as once again the youth of our land goes off to school. God grant that it may be a year of true growth and development toward the coming of His Kingdom on earth, for Christ's sake.

Van Landingham, of Vidalia, and Miss Mary E. Ginn, of Swainsboro, conducted discussions. Theme today was which families should be helped and what part of the program should be emphasized in the future.

KING INSPECTS BOMB DAMAGE—Civilians surrounded King George (left center, next to man in steel helmet) in London's East End during his three-hour inspection yesterday of areas hardest hit in German air raids. They assured the king their spirits were far from being broken.

GERMANS SMASH AT TWILIGHT—German bombers, sweeping over London in a twilight raid which was considered the start of another all-night assault last night, aimed "super-bombs" at the heart of the world's largest city. One huge German bomber was shot down in a battle over Parliament (1) as German reports claimed hits were scored on the East India docks (2) and the Royal Victoria docks (3).

Nazis' Bombs
Rip London's
Big Buildings

shelter, burying a large number of persons, whom air-raids precautions workers immediately began to dig out.
Along a world-famous street, filled ankle-deep with debris, a six-story building was blasted by Nazi bombs, its fourth and fifth story walls blasted outward, exposing helter-skelter office furniture.
"Don't go back that way, the building is likely to collapse any minute," a policeman yelled above the din of bursting bombs and anti-aircraft fire.

(The six-story building appeared, on the basis of the dispatch, to be along Fleet street, the newspaper center of Britain, just off the Strand. Most of the buildings in London are less than six stories high.)
Streets in the heart of London were littered with the glass of hundreds of broken windows. In some places the debris was knee-deep or more.
One building, apparently hit by a 500-pound bomb, had a great gaping hole down the front as though a shell had sheared off its facade. The lower floors were bulging, threatened to crash into the street.
It was that bomb which knocked United Press Correspondent Don Campbell off his feet as he watched the attack from a tower atop the United Press building just off Fleet street.
Great deadly clusters of high explosives smashed into central London, into sections well known to millions of tourists, and pillars of acrid smoke enveloped the heart of the world's greatest city.
So heavy was the smoke that it obscured a blood-red moon and filled the lungs with choking, hot air.
The sky above was filled with fierce air battles and bursting anti-aircraft shells and at one time three German planes were seen crashing with plumes of smoke pouring from them, another blew to bits in mid-air and a fifth hurtled into a patch of trees.
Yesterday's assaults began at 5:10 o'clock in the afternoon with an attack that was crushed by the fierce resistance of British defense planes after a one hour and 15-minute alarm in London.
City an Inferno.
A second alarm began at 8:38 o'clock and the raid increased steadily in intensity until midnight, when the city was an inferno of bursting bombs, anti-aircraft fire and the wail of fire and ambulance sirens.
Early this morning the attack was mounting steadily in its fury and gave every indication of another night-long siege of high explosive, incendiary and delayed-action bombs.

In Monday's first attack at dusk a blazing air battle was fought above the houses of parliament, over the booming chimneys of Big Ben, when fierce counter-attacks by British fighter planes were credited with breaking up the first stage of the night assault.
A big German bomber was hit by anti-aircraft fire in the battle over "the heart of the British Empire" and spiraled crazily to destruction some distance away while crowds around the houses of parliament cheered. One of the bomber's crew parachuted to safety.

Artillery Duel Rages.
Another duel of British and German long-range guns was fought across the 22-mile width of the English channel, with the shells of Nazi "Big Berthas" crashing into the Dover area. British planes bombed the German gun emplacements on the French coast.
Up to 10 o'clock last night the air ministry said 47 German planes had been brought down, against the loss of 13 British planes and 10 pilots.
Big German "screamer" bombs shrieked down upon their targets all over London as the attack became more intense.
United Press Correspondent Campbell, dictating an account of the raid from an observation tower atop one of London's highest vantage points, said that five terrific explosions had thrown him off his feet and "I am dictating this prostrate on the cement floor, expecting that any moment might be the end."
"Black columns of smoke are rising from many directions," Campbell reported. "Some of the last bombs dropped must have been big 500-pounders because they rocked the town for miles around."
"The Germans are pounding and repounding their targets, reopening old wounds."
It was believed that, again, the teeming East End slums and the Thames docks were under fierce bombardment from the air.

Bombs which failed to explode were seen falling, indicating that the Germans again were unleashing delayed-action bombs which may go off some time after daylight unless they are discovered by air raids precautions crews.
Many high explosives smashed into the central London district. Other bombs fell over a wide area of southeast London.

Large gas works and power plants as well as railroad yards are in southwest London on both sides of the Thames, along Fulham road and around the Battersea district east of Vauxhall bridge south of Westminster Abbey.

Reporter Bombed.
United Press correspondent Sidney J. Williams telephoned at midnight and reported "a bomb just blew out all the windows of my home, shaking it and badly frightening my family but there were no casualties."

The noise of the planes over central London was like the drone of a powerhouse turbine, broken by the scream of shells and bombs and the clanging of an unending stream of fire engines rushing to put out spreading flames.

The German planes swept in from all sides, in groups of two and three while searchlight beams groped frantically for them in the sky.

In the first attack German planes sent high explosives and incendiary bombs crashing into seven districts of London for an hour and 15 minutes in what was described officially as the third day of the "blind savagery" of Adolf Hitler's total war.

As the second attack raged anti-aircraft fire rocked the heart of London. Across the Thames deep-throated bomb explosions were heard, apparently among the London docks.

Attack Less Fierce.
Both attacks were far lighter, however, than the raids of Saturday and Sunday nights with their enormous toll of destruction and suffering.

Officials said that terrific opposition put up by Britain's defense planes, smashing large formations of the raiders, had saved London from heavy destruction.
Only "minor damage" was added to the shambles of the week-end siege, it was said.

Indicating the well-aimed opposition of Britain's Spitfire and Hurricane fighters, who battled the bulk of the waves of raiders outside London, was an official statement of German planes losses.
Since Saturday night, the communique said, 140 German planes have been destroyed. These were brought down in Saturday's fierce attacks, it was claimed.

Battle Above Parliament.
Crowds in the streets around the houses of parliament on the bank of the Thames thrilled to the battle of zooming, machinegunning planes overhead, locked in a life-and-death struggle.

The attack was of the hit-and-run type and it was reported that the bulk of the Nazi air fleet had been driven back to the east of London, surprised by Spitfire fighters which had been "hanging" in the sky above cloud banks waiting to pounce upon them.

Seven of the bombers which reached London were reported to have been shot down and along the southeast coast, near the Dover "gateway" to London, eight or nine others were said to have been brought down in air battles.

German Raids
Part of Plan
25 Years Old

Captain Lehmann, Who Died in Zeppelin Blast, Told of Objective.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Germany today is carrying out a plan of air attack conceived but never executed a quarter of a century ago in an effort to bring England to its knees.

The plan, related by Captain Ernst Lehmann, the late Zeppelin expert, in his book "Zeppelin," was to raid London and start a thousand fires. Howard Mingo, American writer on aeronautics, was co-author of the volume, written to explain the character of Germany's air war, 1914-18.

Among the objectives was to have been the Bank of England. The German high command wanted to throw Britain's monetary system into confusion.

Lehmann lost his life in the destruction of the airship Hindenburg at Lakehurst in 1937.

The system of air attacks on England has undergone considerable revision in the "Battle of Britain," partly due, of course, to the development of faster, less vulnerable aircraft.

Censored news dispatches indicate these are the objectives the Germans now hope to achieve:

Stoppage of war materials manufacture by destroying factories.

Stoppage of war materials and food shipments into England by destroying cargo vessels and wharves.

Destruction of lines of communications—railroads and highways.

Destruction of the essential services, such as electric and water supply plants.

Immobilization of the Royal Air Force by the destruction of air-dromes and of enemy aircraft.

Germany's great effort by air against England bears all the earmarks, finally, of the "total war" against civilians and armed services alike, which has been talked about since the start of the conflict a year ago.

In the blow-for-blow raids by Germany and England the Nazis have the advantage of greater factory dispersion. German plants are harder to find, harder to hit.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

LeCraw Given Transfer From 30th Division

Mayor-Nominee Assigned to Staff of Adjutant General's Department

Mayor-nominee Roy LeCraw yesterday was transferred from the 30th Division of the Georgia National Guard, in which he was provost marshal, to the state staff of the adjutant general's department, succeeding Major William M. Ward, who resigned his commission August 1.

The transfer, effective immediately, eliminates LeCraw from the September 16 call to active duty which formally was announced yesterday morning when Adjutant General John E. Stoddard received a transcript of President Roosevelt's military service order. LeCraw emphasized that his transfer in no way released him from guard obligations and said that in case of a national emergency he would be called up to serve in his rank as major. However, he no longer is a member of the 30th Division, which begins a year of training at Camp Jackson on the last day of this month.

Transfer Order.
In signing the transfer order, along with a petition asking the board of examiners to give LeCraw one year in which to complete state staff examinations, General Stoddard said, "It is felt that Major LeCraw will be more useful to the city of Atlanta and the military service of the state of Georgia and the United States as mayor of Atlanta. He will remain a member of the Georgia National Guard and in case of a national emergency or actual war, he would then be subject to active duty."

Major LeCraw's duties with the state staff will, in many respects, be similar to those he performed as provost marshal of the division. He will, however, take additional correspondence examinations in these phases of the new assignment which are not similar.

The mayor-elect said he had planned to join his outfit September 16, when it mobilized, with the intention of seeking a furlough January 1, when he is inaugurated mayor of Atlanta. However, following his transfer, he said he would spend the next three months studying Atlanta financial and governmental problems.

Officially Ordered.
Meanwhile, the mobilization of the Georgia guard was officially ordered in a message sent General Stoddard by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

The order, based upon a bill signed by the President on August 27, called the entire 30th Division of the Georgia National Guard to the colors, excepting only the 30th Tank Company stationed at Forsyth.

During the next seven days, Stoddard pointed out, the Georgia arms of the service will be recruited from its present strength of 2,500 men to a peace-time strength of nearly 3,000 men who will report to Camp Jackson.

General Stoddard, himself commander of the 214th Coast Artillery which, it is expected, will be called up in November, prepared to go before Governor Rivers Thursday and seek some arrangement whereby he can effectively be relieved either of his command or his full-time occupation as adjutant general.

Knudsen Sees Pursuit Plane Do 400 M.P.H.

Army Air Chief Says 'That Is Very Nice Number.'

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP) William S. Knudsen, member of the National Defense Commission in charge of production, and Major General H. H. Arnold, army air chief, voiced satisfaction today after witnessing a Bell Airacobra pursuit plane whizz past them at 400 miles an hour.

Knudsen, while non-committal on defense plans, said he expected airplane production in the United States would be double the 900 planes a month now produced by the fall of 1941.

"I like that very much. That is a very nice number," said General Arnold on seeing the flash by 20 feet from the ground.

Has Majority of Lawyers' Support

As a candidate for solicitor-general, I did not feel it necessary to circulate a petition among lawyers seeking their endorsement. Most of them have assured me of their support and have encouraged me to make this race. Mr. Boykin published a petition, containing about one-third of the members of the Atlanta Bar, endorsing him. 110 names on this petition do not appear in the Official List of Lawyers printed in the Fulton County Daily Report on August 6th, 1940, as active practitioners.

Before being influenced by his petition I request you to call your attorney and ask him if he approves Solicitor Boykin's record—in the light of recent exposures made by me. Ask your lawyer if he approves the following:

1. The "Secret Trade" with the Bug "Big Shots"?
2. Turning Pee Wee Burns loose?
3. The failure to try Investigator Bennett for corrupting a 15-year-old school boy?
4. The horde of political parasites on your pay roll in this office? (20 employees in 1939 who did less work at your expenses, than 5 employees did in 1924 when the fee system existed).
5. Spending $8,400.00 of your money for salaries to two policemen who did no work, because of his failure to try them?
6. Permitting Assistant Solicitor-General Andrews to collect $28,000 from the State for services for which he was already paid in salary from your county treasury?
7. Procuring the $13,875.00 check for more than four years back salary which he had voluntarily forfeited when opposed for re-election in 1932?
8. Mr. Boykin's failure to explain why he turned Jack Lance loose after Lance was sentenced to the electric chair for killing Bert Donaldson, the arch criminal whom Solicitor Boykin appointed as his chief Investigator after his release from Federal Prison.

These are NOT last minute attacks!

If your lawyer says that he approves the foregoing, then consider the following comments and make up your own mind:

"Terribly Disappointing."—Thomas K. Glenn.

Editor, The Journal: Yesterday—Sunday—morning I was not feeling so good upon getting up rather late, but one of the first things that caught my attention was your editorial on "Some of This Makes Me Sick," and it made me feel better. It was a pleasure to realize that your paper has seen fit to write such an editorial against what appeared to be a miscarriage of justice.

After all of the ballyhoo by the Grand Jury asking the co-operation of the newspapers and the public in prosecuting these racketeers, to have turned them all loose with a minimum fine is terribly disappointing.

BUG FINES AGREED ON BEFORE INDICTMENTS

ALLEN DENIES BEING LAWYER FOR BIG SHOTS

Appeared in Courtroom at Request of Ewing—Did not Attend Hotel Conference, He Says.

ANDREWS DOES NOT DENY HE WAS THERE

Court Attaches Received Schedule of Fines and Sentences of Racket Group After Meeting.

Varying comment was made Wednesday on apparently well authenticated reports that a schedule of fines and suspended sentences for twenty-three reputed lottery higher-ups was agreed upon by the solicitor's office before a single indictment had been returned by the grand jury in its exhaustive investigation into racket conditions.

Attorney H. A. Allen, who appeared with defense counsel at the hearing Friday when fines from $50 to $1,000 and five-year suspended sentences were meted out to the alleged higher-ups, said: "I appeared not as the attorney of any of these men, but upon the request of Mr. J. O. Ewing."

"I understood Wednesday from Mr. Ewing that the meeting was to be held that night at the hotel. He asked me to attend, and said that everything was all agreed to; that the lottery men would sign affidavits and would enter pleas and receive fines and suspended sentences. I did not attend the meeting, but Mr. Ewing told me Mr. Andrews (Assistant Solicitor E. E. Andrews) would be there to take the affidavits."

Represented Nobody.
"Friday morning when the cases were in court Mr. Ewing met me in the lobby at the Courthouse and asked me to step into the courtroom while the cases were heard. I made it plain, I think, that I did not know many of the defendants, or that I represented any of them."

At the trial of the lottery higher-ups Friday, after their indictment Thursday by the grand jury, a schedule of fines and suspended sentences was handed by Attorney J. O. Ewing to court attaches, who copied the amount of fines to be collected by the sheriff's office. This typewritten schedule are the names of a majority of the alleged higher-ups, with the amount of their fines and the fact that each was to receive five years' sentence to be suspended.

Below this schedule was the notation: "Shortly further agrees..." but Mr. Ewing withdrew the schedule from the clerk's table when a Journal reporter started copying its contents.

Andrews Doesn't Deny It.
Mr. Andrews, special prosecutor investigating the lottery and other rackets, did not deny he attended the meeting when questioned late Tuesday.

"What about this 'peace parley' at the Hotel Wednesday—who all was there?" he was asked.

"What 'peace parley?' I never heard of such a thing," he replied.

"Maybe it wasn't a 'peace parley' but how about the meeting Wednesday of yourself, Mr. Ewing, and several of the lottery men?"

"Oh! You're telling me. Well, I have just made a statement in writing. I want to see what the reaction is to that. Any other statement I have to make will be in writing," he answered.

Public Press Exposes Underhanded Methods Used By Solicitor General Boykin In Dealing With Underworld "Big Shots"

Editorial, North Side Press, Oct. 29, 1937. The Other Angles—?

There was considerable astonishment, everywhere except in the underworld of Atlanta, when the racketeers' "big shots" of the city last week finally were brought before the bar of justice and allowed to retain their freedom by payment of fines.

All Fulton county is familiar now with the startling announcement of that investigation, with the widely quoted and highly flavored statement by Judge Pomeroy, the presiding judge who had been brought in on something with which he had nothing to do:

"Some of this makes me sick."

Rev. Louie D. Newton Wrote: "COMPROMISE WILL GET US NOWHERE"

Editor, The Journal: Please let me thank you for your very able and courageous editorial in Friday's paper regarding the sentences given the men and women who pleaded guilty in the local "bug" racket.

The attitude of compromise with organized crime will get us nowhere. Your inquiry of what would have been done with these confessed criminals if they had not been able to pay paltry sums of money goes to the heart of the whole question.

Again I thank you for your courageous analysis of this vital situation.

In Crackerland With Ralph Smith

Atlanta Journal, October 25, 1937

From first to last, the numbers racket sensation (?) arouses wonder... Why the hurry in winding up the cases once the grand jury had returned the bills? ... The jury spent all of fifty days digging up enough ex parte evidence to justify the indictments of offenders who confessed their guilt before the ink on the indictments had dried.

One's curiosity is heightened by the realization that none of the accused was likely to vamoose... None had quit the community during the long-drawn-out and highly publicized inquiry.

Several of the number had strong hunches, if not advance information, that they were listed for indictment, but none of them made a move to get away... Instead of attempting to beat the "rap" threatened by the special prosecutor, they were at the Courthouse, bright and early, willing and anxious to enter pleas of guilty.

Why weren't the cases handled as most criminal cases are handled? ... Why hail the accused into court en bloc, when the usual procedure is to arraign them individually and not very often within a week or a month of their indictment, let alone within twenty-four hours thereafter? ... Why the necessity of drafting another judge because of the illness of the judge assigned for the term to hearing criminal cases?

It was all the strangest proceeding that's perplexed the public in a long time.

Verily, the circumstances indicate an understanding, or agreement, far more definite than is alleged to have existed between the police and the numbers racketeers.

The surprising thing of the whole mess is that so much time and energy were expended, when similar results might have been secured overnight, in the same circumstances.

None doubts but that the whole shebang would have voluntarily answered accusations had they been assured in advance that the judge would assess fines and suspended sentences instead of chair-gang terms! ...

Arraignment on accusations, however, would have brought the accused face to face with City Court Judge Jesse Wood, whose established practice is to send second offenders to the gang, and it is doubtful, obviously, that such an understanding as apparently was reached could not have been carried out had this procedure been followed.

Until Mr. Boykin and his aides realized that his position had become desperate and that he was face to face with defeat, he seemed inclined to ignore me and my campaign. During the last few days Mr. Boykin has used the radio and newspapers extensively. He has hired many persons to join some of his own force of political parasites to launch a "whispering campaign" to discredit me—by circulating such statements as the one made by George Pounds to Mr. Bell at Roswell, that I was an "80% Hitlerite." In view of this silly statement, I submit my record of service to the nation.

Volunteered for World War at age 16;—Served overseas;—Former Commander Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Atlanta Post No. 1 American Legion;—Elected delegate to National Convention of American Legion in Boston this month by Legionnaires of 5th District;—Author of law requiring registration and fingerprinting of aliens.

Hundreds of men and women who are voluntarily working for me, without hope of reward, assure me that I will be overwhelmingly elected tomorrow. I am deeply grateful for the support of my friends.

I pledge my very best efforts to give fearless and honest service in this office.

WILLIAM G. McRAE,
Candidate for Solicitor-General.

The case against the numbers game in Atlanta could, and would, have been more effectively handled had the matter never been given to the grand jury... The names and addresses of all those indicted by the grand jury have been bantered about the town for months and months on end, and several of them, it is stated, have been tried and convicted several times.

Why not bring all of them into court on accusations sworn out in the City Criminal Court? That might have been done easily and expeditiously, and it is dollars to doughnuts that all would have entered pleas of guilty upon assurances that they'd be fined and not chinganged!

The more you study the numbers racket fiasco the more you wonder about its mysteries... Why the urgent appeal for the co-operation of the public in stamping out the evil? Why the voluntary censorship of the financial news in the papers? Why all the fanfare about sensational (?) developments before the grand jury? Why the disclosures of alleged connivance between the police and the racketeers?

And why, when the offenders stand up in court and admit their guilt, are they given nominal fines and their freedom, when the special prosecutor himself repeatedly declared the only way to destroy the evil in Atlanta was to send the culprits to the chain gang.

Where's that equality under the law, anyhow, that we hear so much about? Countless hapless employees of the "big shots" doing time and the "big shots" enjoying their freedom and liberty though confessedly guilty.

Presumably, those who plead guilty will sin no more—presumably—but what of their successors in the racket? Are succeeding "big shots" to be treated any differently from those who've just been arraigned? ... And where's the lesson of fear, and where's the respect of law that the courts are supposed to preserve? It is too much to believe that a $5,000 fine will act as a deterrent upon a criminal practice that returns, we have been assured, $50,000 a day in this fair city.

Discusses Problems of Movie Men.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 9.—Just loafing in the office of Nat Williams, who runs a string of picture theaters down this-a-way and is an official of an organization of theater owners.

Mr. Williams had just returned, when this was typed, from a visit to Washington, along with Bob Wilby, of Atlanta, also a movie big shot.

Mr. Williams feels his mission to the capital city of these United States was about as futile as pounding sand down a rat hole open at both ends.

It seems the Department of Justice is prosecuting several hundred suits simultaneously against as many corporations, charging them with violations of the anti-trust laws. And the department has engaged several hundred bright young lawyers who dig deeply into involved affairs for a few days and emerge with complete knowledge of the subject. Nat said the lawyer who dealt with the motion picture case had a profound knowledge about the motion picture industry because he had investigated a string of movie houses in the Tennessee mountains for two weeks. Mr. Williams offered in rebuttal that he, Mr. Williams, had been in the movie business for only about 20 years, but thought he had a fair working knowledge of the theater managers' problems. Which seemed to have made little impression.

The topic upon which Mr. Williams spoke eloquently and at length was something about that movie menace called block booking. He believes, if I understood him clearly, that block booking is pretty tough on theater owners, hereinafter known as "the exhibitor," but not half so tough as the new system the Department of Justice prefers.

"Block booking," in terms of the movies, means that M-G-M or Paramount or some other producer insists that a theater owner, or exhibitor, buy all 40 of said producer's films, sight unseen, good, bad, indifferent or impossible.

But said exhibitor has a right to cancel 20 per cent of said orders for films and often is permitted to cancel even another 5 per cent.

Groups of Five

But the Department of Justice, in an effort to protect said exhibitor, rather leans toward permitting the sale to him of "groups," not "blocks," of five films, with no cancellation privilege. Which might easily result, Mr. Williams points out, in his purchasing one feature which would pack his Rose theater to the doors and four "turkeys" which would chase his steady patrons so far out of Thomas county they would never return.

Mr. Williams and other exhibitors from far and wide presented their side of the case to the Department of Justice authorities, but came away convinced they had made hardly a dent in the convictions of the judges. He is extremely displeased. And he believes his public will be equally as displeased if he is forced to offer them one top-notch film followed by four which would make even a nine-year-old moron walk out. I know the kind of picture he's talking about because I've seen some of them. And in our best Atlanta houses.

To present the other side of the picture, the producers in Hollywood defend the block booking system by saying they've got to know where their money is coming from before they start shooting. They've got to turn out 40 or so pictures a year, with expenses all contracted for. And when they make a picture they've got to sell 'em. They say a man will subscribe—and pay in advance—for 52 issues of the Saturday Evening Post or 12 issues of the Readers' Digest or even 365 issues of The Atlanta Constitution and will rarely holler if an occasional number is below standard. I can agree with them as to the two first-named publications. But I am sure the third is always up to a hundred per cent unless I am feeling indisposed or there ain't no news nowhere. You couldn't ask even as hard-boiled a city editor as our Mr. Hines to assign Willard Cope and Kenneth Rogers to go out and commit a triple murder and get a dozen good pictures of it, merely to let readers at the breakfast table forget the coffee is so punk and the toast burned on both sides.

High Mileage

As an former visits to southwestern Georgia I have been impressed with the high values the residents extract from their automobiles before trading them in for the new model.

My four-year-old sedan has a mere 35,000 miles registered on its speedometer because we rarely go anywhere. But a woman owner of a car down here who fails to roll up 40,000 miles a year feels she is a shut-in. Or so I am told.

Because they're always going places. Over to Valdosta or to Thomasville or to Tallahassee or for a fishing trip to St. Mark's. Indeed, I have it on excellent authority that few cars ever have opportunity to cool off unless the owner is bedridden. Like the Texas cowboy, who would spend two hours catching a pony so he could saddle him and ride him half a mile instead of walking, our friends in Quitman climb into a car to go around the block for a soft drink.

It is fine for the gasoline and tire dealers but I am told the shoe merchants are in despair. The average car owner doesn't even need a pair of half-soles oftener than once in two years.

Gives His Approval To Handling of Destroyer Swap.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—So you don't object to the destroyer-naval base swap, only you don't like the way it was done?

Well, bear in mind first, that it was done legally. When in the past the navy has decided to junk outworn equipment, or the army has sold a truck-load of condemned field boots to the old-clothes man, nobody has ever raised the question that it could be done only by joint resolution of both houses of congress.

Of course if the President, by his recent act, had committed the country to a course of future action, congressional approval in advance would have been in order. But under the terms of his deal, we are committed to nothing. We don't even have to occupy the naval bases unless congress sees fit to vote money for their development. We are not even responsible for the defense of the islands, unless we choose to assume it.

Since we are committed to nothing, the President had just as much right to make this deal as she has to change his shirt without submitting this paper to executive act for congressional approval.

Deal No Surprise.

Certainly the country was not taken by surprise. The deal has been advocated for months. It was thoroughly discussed for about a week, after its terms were announced from London, before it was finally put into force by the President. Public approval of these terms was practically unanimous.

But if you still don't like the way it was done, let's try doing it your way. Suppose the President had dodged the issue and passed the buck to congress, as you suggest. A large majority in that body favors it, of course, but there is a minority which doesn't. This minority could have held it up in committee and filibustered on the floor—wrangling, arguing, demanding from England impossible terms. Quite possibly they would have talked England to death, for these destroyers, which soon will be in British waters, may be the factor which will prevent a German invasion of the islands.

Profited From Swap.

Now as for the deal itself: Those destroyers originally cost us about $150,000,000. In exchange we get bases which are more valuable to our fleet and air force than $2,000,000 worth of new equipment, because they extend its range. Our Atlantic defense lines have been pushed a thousand miles out to sea. Both Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires are now within the protective range of our bombers, making the likelihood of a German landing there extremely remote.

Furthermore and most important of all, our first line of defense, which is the British navy, whether we like it or not, has been greatly strengthened. If it ever should give way, we also have, in addition to those naval bases, Churchill's promise that it would never be scuttled or surrendered, but would leave European waters to buttress the new world.

What more could you want for $125,000,000, regardless of who did it or how it was done?

Cadets To Start Training At Montgomery Air Base

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 9.—(P)—The first contingent of flying cadets from the eastern United States arrived today at the new southeast air base, preparatory to beginning basic air corps training Saturday.

The youths came from various colleges east of the Mississippi, where they already have undergone training in primary air schools sponsored by the government. Over 100 of the 120 selected for the initial class arrived this morning. They wore the uniforms of their various schools.

Chicago Bans Showing Film About Niemöller

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(P)—Lieutenant Harry J. Costello, of the Police Censor Board, said today that public showing of "Pastor Hall," motion picture based upon the life of the Rev. Martin Niemöller, German evangelical Lutheran clergyman, who was imprisoned by the Nazis, would not be permitted in Chicago.

The film was banned, he said, because its subject matter was "of an exceedingly controversial nature."

"Pastor Hall" was produced in England. American rights to the picture are vested in James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President.

Horse Guards Become Unit Of Antiaircraft

Conversion of 23d Cavalry Is Announced by Stoddard.

The Twenty-third Cavalry of the Georgia National Guard, which includes the Governor's Horse Guards stationed in Atlanta, was converted yesterday by the War Department from a mounted unit to an antiaircraft battalion, it was announced by Adjutant General John E. Stoddard.

The action was taken after conferences last week with General Stoddard and culminates a month of controversy between guardsmen and regular army officers, who at first planned to transfer the unit into an antitank battalion.

Some Objected. Local guardsmen objected to the proposed transfer and Stoddard went to Washington to straighten out the controversy. Both Stoddard and Captain P. D. Christian, head of the horse troop, yesterday said they were "pleased" with the conversion order.

The Atlanta squad of the Twenty-third Cavalry consists of 66 men and eight officers. Another 150 men and officers are stationed at Savannah and Hinesville. The unit has been equipped with machineguns, which it now replaces with 37 millimeter automatic antiaircraft batteries.

To Sell Horses. Captain Christian said yesterday, following the transfer, that all but 12 of the troop's horses would be reclaimed by the U. S. government, which owns them. The 12 horses which are owned by the troop will be sold at auction.

The transfer order also requires the unit to enlist 106 additional men and 10 more officers to bring it up to peace strength. How many enlistments would be credited to the Atlanta branch was not known at headquarters.

Officially the cavalry unit becomes the 101st separate battalion of the coast artillery. As far as can be ascertained at present, Captain Christian will remain in command of the local unit, which will continue to call itself the Governor's Horse Guards.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 9.—(AP)—An 82-year-old man found wandering in the Union station in a dazed condition, with an old paper hatbox containing $95,889.50 in bonds, cashier's checks, and cash was held in protective custody by police today.

He gave his name as James D. Davidson, retired Long Beach, Cal., merchant. At headquarters where he was given a room and bed for the night, Davidson told police.

"Heck, boys, nobody is going to steal my bonds and my cashier's checks. Shucks, they're negotiable only if you got my signature on 'em, I don't mind saying boys," that before they passed that Lindbergh law, I was mighty afraid of kidnaping gangs gettin' me."

Davidson said he retired in 1921 after operating a dry goods and livery stable business and that he had lived since in rooming houses in Long Beach and Riverside.

TAKE NOTICE!

It is apparent that the Congress of the United States will effect legislation requiring many of our young citizens to report for active and intensive military training over an extended period of time.

Many of those who will be subject to conscription are city, county and state taxpayers. The burden of expense incident to compulsory military training in defense of our nation is always a problem to those who respond.

First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Atlanta believes that our Civic Officers—city, state and county—are cognizant of the sacrifice and hardship such military service demands, not only in the suspension of earnings, but in added problems of rehabilitation.

First Federal Savings and Loan Association has requested and hopes that immediate steps will be taken by city, county and state officials to suspend the payments of all taxes payable by persons who are conscripted for active military service until such time as such citizens and taxpayers are released from active military service and rehabilitated to their regular earning status.

A Vital Measure for National Defense

Our government is spending 15 billion dollars in building gun power, sea power, air power, and man power to enable this nation to defend itself against the attack of any aggressor.

The vast defense machine which we are building, with its tanks, trucks, mechanized artillery, battleships, and thousands of airplanes, will depend for its efficiency upon adequate and instantly available supplies of gasoline and other petroleum products, the life-blood of the modern army and navy.

Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., head of the National Defense Commission's Materials Division, has indicated that one of his chief concerns in defense preparations is "more pipe lines" to insure adequate, fast transportation of this "life-blood" to the country's military and production centers.

Pipe lines are vital for this purpose in more ways than one. In case of attack or national emergency, all available railway facilities will be needed for the transportation of troops, ammunition and supplies. Transportation of gasoline and oil by rail would result in traffic "bottlenecks" such as many of you will remember developed during the World War, finally necessitating government intervention.

Furthermore, the R. F. C. has already recognized the necessity of attack-proof reserves of military fuel, and has provided 50 Million Dollars for the underground storage of high-grade airplane gasoline.

In the United States, as a part of its existing defense structure there is a vast network of pipe lines, extending from the Southwestern states of Texas and Oklahoma up through the Midwestern states and on eastward to the Atlantic Seaboard. The Pacific Coast has its own pipe line system, protecting all parts of that section from shortage.

Only the Southeast is without this protection. Only the Southeast, vastly important from a strategic military standpoint, has no pipe lines.

If in an emergency, sea-coast cities in this area are cut off by blockade from getting gasoline by water, this section, with the Southeastern Pipe Line, is assured of a constant supply, as the flow of oil products may be reversed at will, so that this essential fuel can be piped from the coast inland, or equally as easily from inland sources back to the coast.

The Southeastern Pipe Line needs only to be connected, in order to serve the three vital military bases of Fort Benning, Fort McPherson and Fort Oglethorpe. It could also easily supply other army and navy bases in this section. In case of enemy-infested Atlantic waters, ships could unload valuable petroleum supplies at Gulf ports for pipeline shipment to inland points and Atlantic ports, without venturing into danger.

The Southeastern Pipe Line is being built at a cost of several millions of dollars, without one cent of defense tax money paid from the pockets of American citizens. While designed as a commercial enterprise, it is ready, and certainly willing, to start performing its part in our national defense program as soon as completed.

To attain security, we must continue in our preparations for defense. It is already a well-established fact that this pipe line or any pipe line has a vital part in national defense. We believe that when this fact is recognized by the opposition, private interests will be subordinated to the general welfare, so that security will be assured for the nation as a whole, and this pipe line can begin operation without further delay.

Henry Wallace Brands G. O. P. As 'Appeasers'

Democratic Candidate, However, Says Willkie No Friend of Hitler.

HASTINGS, Neb., Sept. 9.—(AP) Henry A. Wallace linked the Republican party with "appeasement" again tonight but cleared Wendell L. Willkie, the party's standard bearer, of the charge.

"I insist that Republicans are obstructing national defense, no matter what their spokesmen say," the Democratic vice presidential nominee declared in a prepared address here at the halfway mark of his two-day, 500-mile tour through Nebraska.

Wallace did not mention Willkie directly tonight, but at almost every courthouse and town square stop during the day he reiterated this quotation from his first speech this morning at Weeping Water:

"The Republican candidate is not an appeaser and not a friend of Hitler. I'll say, too, that every Republican is not an appeaser. But you can be sure that every Nazi, every Hitlerite and every appeaser is a Republican."

He charged Republicans in the house of representatives were responsible for the Fish amendment to delay application of peacetime conscription 60 days.

"I said in my acceptance speech that the Republican party is the party of appeasement. It is more than that. It is the party of obstruction. Again and again it has obstructed the efforts of President Roosevelt to defend this hemisphere."

WILLKIE CONFERS WITH HENRY FORD

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Sept. 9.—(AP) After a brief talk with Henry Ford, Wendell L. Willkie announced tonight that his first major campaign address next Monday at Coffeyville, Kan., would interpret "the difference between my philosophy of free enterprise and that of the New Deal."

The Republican presidential nominee said that the speech would tie in domestic issues with international affairs. He also disclosed that one of the talks on his western tour would take up the third-term issue.

Officials Claim Carol Sold Out To Axis Powers

Promised Hitler Land for Protection From Russia, They Say.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 9.—(AP)—General Ion Antonescu advanced Rumania another step toward complete Nazification today through anti-Jewish laws as fresh charges of "selling out" to the Axis powers were raised against abdicated King Carol.

The military dictator decreed all Jewish "communities" must vacate synagogues, hospitals and schools unless they can establish a membership of 400 in cities and 200 in rural areas. Rumanians expected vacated properties to be taken over by the state.

Baptist Sects Hit.

Another decree asserted that members of Baptist advent sects, organized 18 months ago under British and United States influence, henceforth would be regarded as "without religion" unless they associated themselves with Catholics or a recognized Protestant church.

With the government delving into Carol's private financial affairs, it was reported authoritatively a decree would be issued prohibiting transfer of any real estate amounting to more than 20 acres pending completion of the inquiry.

This would apply to Carol's extensive real estate holdings, including fruit, honey and sugar farms, hunting lodges and vast tracts of city property.

Sell-Out to Hitler.

High sources declared evidence had been uncovered showing Carol was responsible for the German-Italian dictated transfer of northern Transylvania to Hungary.

Following the forced cession of Bessarabia and Bucovina to Soviet Russia in June, these sources said the King wrote Adolf Hitler for protection of the northeastern frontier with Russia and promised in return to "make any territorial cessions Berlin might ask for."

Texan Predicts Willkie Victory In His State

N. C., Tennessee, Florida To Vote Republican, He Says.

Texas will go for Wendell Willkie and don't be surprised if several other southern states, including North Carolina, Tennessee, and Florida, fall in behind the Willkie banner.

That information was brought to Atlanta yesterday by L. A. (Pat) Casey, Houston, Texas, businessman, who is stumping the south in the interest of the GOP nominee.

Here for a short stopover between planes, the Texan said he was a lifelong Democrat, born in Arkansas. He said he was not a politician and was not interested in any job for himself or his friends.

"I believe in the American form of government and the tradition of the Democratic party," he said. "I am a Democrat now. I will vote for Willkie as a Democrat and I will be a Democrat after his election."

Casey takes the position that Willkie is a good Democrat. In predicting that Willkie would carry Texas, he pointed out that Herbert Hoover did it once and added "we are amazed at Willkie's strength in every section of the state."

The Texan is now engaged in a tour of the south arranging a meeting of Willkie Democrats for Nashville September 19.

Taylor Brings F.D.R. Message From the Pope

Vatican Still Strives for World Peace, Envoy Reports.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP)—An assurance from Pope Pius that the Vatican still strives for world peace reached President Roosevelt today three hours after he signed a bill providing the biggest peace-time armament fund in U. S. history.

A verbal message from the Pope was relayed to the chief executive by Myron C. Taylor, just back from Rome, where he was sent last fall as Mr. Roosevelt's personal representative to collaborate with His Holiness in efforts to restore peace.

Taylor made a report at a two-hour luncheon conference with Mr. Roosevelt at the latter's family home. Later, through Secretary Stephen Early, the President said the gist of the message from the Pope was that "the Vatican is doing everything it possibly can to bring about world peace."

Taylor also gave Mr. Roosevelt information he had picked up through the Vatican and there was no denial that the outlook for peace appeared as gloomy as ever.

Cartoon by Fontaine Fox Will Be Presented at Ball

... FORTUNATE INDEED will be the Atlanta who will win the original cartoon by that world-renowned artist, Fontaine Fox, at the brilliant Red, White and Blue ball tomorrow evening at the Piedmont Driving Club for the benefit of the British Relief Society.

The cartoon is one of seven sent here by Mr. Fox as a generous and affectionate compliment to Mrs. Dan MacDougald, his sister. Mrs. MacDougald, you know, is co-chairman with Mrs. Albert Thornton for the recently formed Atlanta unit of the nation-wide organization for aiding the British, and when she wrote her brother requesting an illustrative cartoon for the ball, the famous artist promptly sketched and dispatched to his sister several drawings appropriate to the noble cause. Mrs. MacDougald and Mrs. Thornton submitted the sketches to Flora Wright, the capable chairman of the ball, to choose one for the Atlanta ball. And Flora, in turn, called in a number of her co-workers for the affair at the cocktail hour on Sunday to help her make the selection.

The cartoon chosen displays Mr. Fox's best-known comic strip characters, the Toonerville Folks, and is entitled "The Terrible-Tempered Mr. Bang." It depicts a golf course scene wherein Mr. Bang sits astride his prostrate opponent whom he has just knocked down. Says Mr. Bang: "Every time I would relax and get going good, he would deliberately bring up the subject of Hitler."

To give you an advance peep at the attractive poster, Sally Forth herewith prints a picture of Flora displaying the trophy which will be listed among the valuable prizes offered tomorrow evening.

... THE CHILDHOOD romance of Sue Thomason and Charles Edward Pattillo Jr. will have its culmination in their marriage on September 18 in Emory University chapel. Sue and her fiancé played together when they were children and their love affair began to flourish in those golden days. Her engagement ring is a large diamond set in gold, and smaller diamonds beautify each side of the ring.

Sue will wear an antique gold chain around her neck, from which is suspended a pink cameo which belonged to her great-grandmother. Another token which belonged to her great-grandmother is the ring set with a square diamond, and which Sue will wear on her wedding day. Upon their return from their honeymoon trip, Sue and Charles will establish residence in Athens, where they will keep house in an apartment, while the groom-elect will enroll for his senior year at the University of Georgia. In her apartment, the bride-elect will use an antique mahogany barrel-back chair and the footstool to match, which belonged to her great-grandmother. The walnut table which will have its place in the scheme of furnishings, is the same table used by Dr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Pattillo, the groom-elect's parents, when they started house-keeping many years ago.

... EASTERNERS arriving at an early date for the marriage of pretty Ann Creekmore, of Athens, and Gordon Jones, of this city, will have a real glimpse of the old south at its best when they are encoined in the beautiful colonial home of Agnes White in Athens. Agnes, you know, will be an attendant for Ann when she ascends the bridal aisle on October 8.

The pretty Athens bridesmaid resides with her aunt, Mrs. William F. Bradshaw, in one of the college town's most beautiful homes on Prince avenue. Recognized as a showplace, the lovely home has been photographed and described in Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

The friendship of Ann and Agnes had been a fond one, and it will be the latter and her aunt, Mrs. Bradshaw, who entertain at the rehearsal party on October 8 in Athens.

... POPULAR Helen Douglas Mankin, who is seeking re-election to the state legislature, has set a new style in pocketbook handles and developed a new wrinkle in this all-important feminine accessory.

While handing out her political cards recently, the handle of her overloaded pocketbook gave way. But this did not daunt the enthusiastic young Atlanta lawyer, for she grabbed a rope and fastened it to the rings on either side. The pocketbook now swings from her shoulder. She smilingly explains, "Just the rope off the old oaken bucket."

One Opinion Is No Cause For General Statement

By Dr. William Brady.

I have been reading your column for years (writes a professional man). It was you who first informed me concerning the ambulant treatment of hernia. A number of physicians had urged me to enter the hospital and have the operation. Acting on your suggestion, I consulted Dr. H. B. S. who proved highly skilled and capable. I believe my hernia is permanently cured and have not had the slightest interruption of my everyday activities. It is now over two years since I finally discarded my truss and there has been no sign of any recurrence of the hernia. Therefore I was astonished by the article inclosed—I thought it might interest you, too.

H. B. S.

The article is a one-column essay under a screaming four-column headline "Injections for Hernia Declared 'Worthless' by a Bright Young Man Featured as 'Science Editor.'" According to the article a doctor working in a "clinic" had tried his hand at injection treatment of hernia in 74 cases and had not been very successful with it, so he decided the method was "virtually worthless."

The doctor admitted, however, that the ambulant or injection treatment appeared to give "lasting relief" in two-thirds of the cases of "very simple indirect hernia."

A plodding door-to-door doctor naturally has no proper comprehension of the scientific aspects of the question, but still it does seem that a method of treatment which gives satisfactory results in two-thirds of even a series of selected cases is not "virtually worthless," even in the hands of one who has not seen fit to seek instruction in the difficult technique under a teacher who has had successful experience with it.

Too many doctors have attempted to use this and other modern methods without the formality of such instruction, and their bungling brings unmerited discredit on the method—which they hasten to blame as loudly as they can, to cover their failure.

Consulting Watson's "Hernia"—a recognized standard textbook which is or should be in every good medical library (second edition, 1938, Mosby, St. Louis), one finds these statistics:

"In a total of 659 patients over 30 years of age operated on for indirect inguinal hernia at the hospital—170 of them were cured, or 25.8 per cent."

"In 6,027 operations by 34 surgeons, there was recurrence of the hernia in 5.58 per cent of the cases."

"In 1,485 hernia operations on 1,092 patients there were 25 operative deaths."

The operation for hernia is not exactly a 100 per cent cure. But let's be practical rather than scientific and admit the operation is not only necessary and advisable, but the only method of treatment suitable for many cases of hernia; and that it succeeds in curing the hernia in the majority of cases.

If I had hernia I'd choose injection treatment. Along with it I'd follow suitable exercises to prevent hernia and aid in the cure. These exercises will be described in a later talk about hernia, or you may send stamped addressed envelope for monograph on "Hernia."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Kind.

Is there any food value or vitamin content in the rind of an orange? Does it contain anything harmful? Have been drinking orange juice made by grinding up whole orange, rind, pulp and all.

M. R. S. M. L. E.

Answer—It has practically no food value, some value as cellulose or residue which promotes good intestinal digestion, perhaps some value in vitamins, nothing harmful in it, all right if the orange juice is satisfactory in taste.

Rolls and Blood Pressure.

Is it wise for one with high blood pressure to do six-somers each night and morning?

Answer—Depends on what ails him. He had better be guided by his physician's advice.

This little schoolgirl, Sally Frost, likes onion soup and already she has asked her mother if she can have it some days in her school lunchbox. Her mother said "yes" and Sally is so pleased she had to show us the lunch box and the bottle that will hold the soup. She goes to R. L. Hope school.

MY DAY: Blood Transfusions For the British

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—I have read in the newspapers that people have been donating their blood to England to use in transfusions for wounded soldiers. Somehow, it seemed that had nothing to do with me, until someone asked me yesterday if there was anything I could do to bring it to people's attention.

It appears that a cablegram has come from Dr. John Beattie, chief of the British army blood transfusion service, to the American Red Cross, requesting 10,000 pints of blood in the next four weeks. This would represent 20,000 donors. I imagine the Red Cross headquarters anywhere will be able to give one full information later on, but for the present, I am told, Greater New York is the only place where the hospitals are actually co-operating with the various Red Cross chapters.

Donors can go to the Presbyterian, Mount Sinai, New York hospital and the Long Island College hospital in Brooklyn. This is the first time that an attempt at such mass production of blood plasma has been made. It will mean the difference between life and death to many wounded soldiers. It will hardly be felt by the individual donor.

There is a grim article on Poland in Friday evening's PM. Among the list of things which give us a glimpse of the life in Poland, the first item, "All men and women between 16 and 47 must register for work in Germany," is a little reminiscent of the days when we sold slaves in this country and divided families, sending them to new masters in different places. It is quite true that there is no place in Nazi culture for a man like Paderewski. No wonder his statue has been removed by them from Poland.

Yesterday was a most beautiful day. I had a ride and a swim and worked two or three hours. At 4 o'clock the teachers from the three new consolidated schools came to tea at the big house. It was a great pleasure to have an opportunity to meet them, for I am away so much that I really feel I know little of the constructive forces in my community. I always feel that teachers are among the most important influences in any community.

Lunch Box For Childish Appetites

By Sally Saver.

Children are going back to school, and lunch boxes must be filled with nourishing healthful food—with food that is different and appealing to the childish appetite. Nutritionists continue to stress that a child needs at least three or four well-planned, balanced meals to supply the energy he needs for growth, maintenance, hard play and study. This means that the noon lunch must not be put together hit or miss but must be planned to provide the food elements, sufficient vitamins, minerals and calories that a growing child needs.

This fall send the children back to school each morning with a bright lunch box containing a thermos bottle or a jar with a tight-fitting lid that will carry milk, soups and other liquids without spilling. Plan the school lunches ahead of time to avoid the wild scramble in the morning. Have cocoa in the thermos or your child's favorite soup, or a fruit juice to go with a yummy piece of cheese. The thermos is invaluable for carrying hot nourishing broths in winter.

Use varying breads for the sandwiches: muffins and the whole grain breads, whole wheat, rye, and brown. Nut or raisin bread makes an agreeable change and an occasional bun or roll is a splendid surprise. Sandwich fillings can, with a little imagination, be different: use fruits, vegetables and cheese often as well as meat. Try omitting sandwiches one day, and make a lunch of cold chicken or lamb with a dish of vegetable salad and milk. Instead of cakes and pies, try puddings and baked custards, gingerbread or a baked apple. A covered dish or cup will not spill if packed carefully with a tight-fitting cover and many semi-liquids can be packed in a glass covered with wax paper and a string or rubber band.

Do things with eggs. Bake them in individual casseroles; stuff them and use them in raw salads that can be packed with a scrubbed raw carrot to nibble or a tomato or a celery stalk. Chopped hard-cooked egg, chopped celery, ground raw carrot, and salad dressing in a sandwich add interest as well as vitamins.

And when you pack the sandwiches wrap them individually in waxed paper to keep them moist and fresh. For color, cover them with gay paper napkins and fasten extra-thick sandwiches together with colored toothpicks.

Suggested Menu for Lunch Boxes.

- Apricot pulp with cream cheese spread on white bread
- Stuffed Egg
- Sliced meat and lettuce sandwich on brown bread
- 2 Olives 3 carrot strips
- Apple 2 oatmeal cookies
- Cocoa in vacuum or other jar.

Russell Versus Russell—Star Competes With Self

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 9.—Ann Sothorn has persuaded husband Roger Pryor to remain in Hollywood. Pryor was all set to leave town with his much-in-demand orchestra. But when Annie wept and said she'd be lonely, Pryor cancelled his dates, and instead will make some more pictures here. This will be much cheaper for both of them, particularly Ann. The last time hubby toured with his band Ann spent all her salary lying to him for week ends. And even with her current $1,500 a week, this is a little hard on the bank account.

The whole town is laughing at the Rosalind Russell versus Rosalind Russell competition. Both her latest pictures, "No Time for Comedy" and "Hired Wife," were previewed on the same night. Warners made the first, Universal the second, and both studios kept moving up the dates until they finally landed on the same evening. Universal argued that they chose the night first. Warners counters that they made the picture first. The only way for the working press to decide which picture to go to was to weigh the respective merits of her leading men. She had Jimmy Stewart in "No Time for Comedy" and Brian Aherne in "Hired Wife." The theaters are next door to each other, and an unpleasant time was had by this correspondent, seeing half of one and half of the other.

Before John Wayne went into his kissing scene with Marlene Dietrich he put on record, "I'm a Family Man, and This Sort of Thing Embarrasses Me." Thereupon Miss Dietrich patted his cheek, and said, "That's all right. I'm a family woman!" . . . Talking about families, the Andrea Leeds-Bob Howard baby has a December date arrival. . . . Deanna Durbin's car license is in-217. Fiance Vaughn Paul is one behind—in-218. And both cars are the same model. Deanna's marriage to Vaughn has been rumored for so long now that Deanna's neighbors are predicting an early wedding.

THE WOMAN'S QUIZ

Q. How may I remove fingernail polish from clothing?
A. Apply amyl acetate, or the following preparation which is used by cleaners for removing fingernail polish: two ounces amyl acetate (banana oil), 1 ounce benzol, 1-2 ounce denatured alcohol to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. This will dissolve synthetic fabrics, such as rayon, therefore one must be sure of the material before applying the mixture.

Q. What are the minimum requirements for an opening bid of one no-trump in contract bridge?
A. One well-known bridge authority recommends in general at least 4 or 5 honor tricks, or 3 1-2 honor tricks and 8 honor cards. Also, the hands should contain at least three cards in each suit and the strength should be divided among at least three suits.

Reds Tutor Objectors

Glasgow, Scotland, discovered recently that it had an anarchist school where conscientious objectors were taught the best ways to avoid military service. Back of a shop whose windows were filled with red literature the instructors held a court patterned after the regular tribunal that examines "conchie's." The student learned that if he failed to answer his calling-up notice he would be arrested, fined $20 and held for questioning. "Don't put your name to anything," the anarchist "judge" advised, "even to a receipt for blankets. Refuse medical examination. You will be taken before a court-martial and, if sentenced, you will be jailed again."

A weak, undernourished condition often enables functional dysmenorrhea to get a foothold; this leads to much of woman's suffering from headaches, nervousness, and other periodic discomfort.

CARDUI's principal help for such distress comes from the way it usually stimulates appetite, and increases flow of gastric juice; thus aids digestion; helps build energy, strength, physical resistance to periodic pain for many.

Another way, many women find help for periodic distress: Take CARDUI a few days before and during "the time." Women have used CARDUI for more than 50 years.

Other prizes were awarded the miniature entry of Mrs. Haskell Boyer, of the Linwood Garden Club and to the one of Mrs. W. W. Anderson for the Habersham Garden Club.

Among the last entries in this contest was one of the Log Cabin Garden Club, whose president, Mrs. J. R. Marbut, arranged tuberoses and dainty gray foliage in a miniature turquoise strawberry jar. For the Roxboro Garden Club, Mrs. Sam R. Callaway combined wild asters and grasses in a small pottery jug.

The program to be followed in September will be arrangements with vines predominating, though other flowers may also be used. A simple arrangement of coral vine in an antique greenish glass bottle was recently entered for the Oakland City Garden Club by Mrs. Lillian Elder and Mrs. Leila Turner.

A wrought iron and glass container, planned for a buffet, filled with petunias and trailing philodendron was the entry of Mrs. L. S. Kelly of the East Lake Garden Club. Good color harmony characterized the arrangement of Mrs. Harvey Hill of the Mimosa Garden Club who combined varieties of vines in a green pottery urn with a cluster of apples at the rim.

The Japanese scene planned by Mrs. E. H. Adams and Mrs. R. T. David of the Atkins Park Garden Club was most distinctive. A fore gate framed with silver lace vine was placed before a shrine where a figurine held burning incense with fancy caladium leaves grouped at the base.

Miss Knight Weds Alton A. Evans.

Social interest throughout the state is centered in the announcement made by Mrs. E. E. Knight of the marriage of her daughter Miss Mary Frances Knight, to Alton Anderson Evans, of Augusta formerly of Atlanta and Barnesville.

The service was performed quietly in the study of the Rev. W. A. Duncan, pastor of the First Baptist church of East Point on August 31.

The bride was attired in a model of brown trico crepe with matching accessories. Her flowers were talliesman roses and valley lilies.

Following a wedding trip through the south the young couple will reside in Augusta, where Mr. Evans is connected with J. B. White & Co.

Mrs. Thomas Declares Vote Charges True

President of Women Voters Says Many Calls Confirm Accusations.

Mrs. J. D. Thomas, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters which has initiated a campaign to eliminate laxity and inefficiency in carrying out city election laws as allegedly evidenced at Wednesday's primary, yesterday declared "conditions referred to in Sunday's Constitution have been confirmed repeatedly by calls from every section of the city."

At the same time Mrs. Thomas issued a statement in which she listed new complaints which have been filed with her by citizens and voters.

She said: "Citizens in every walk of life have commended the Atlanta League of Women Voters for their efforts to bring to light violations of the rules of the city Democratic executive committee and glaring irregularities in the method of conducting primaries. "A tremendous number of telephone calls came to me Sunday and yesterday and it is interesting to note how many 'good citizens' in Atlanta realize the unpardonable and want something done about it if somebody else will do it."

Decline to Give Names. "Many calls came from persons who decline to give their names. Those I refused to talk to. Many were willing to give their names if they were kept confidential."

"It is difficult to make these citizens realize that the league is not dealing in personalities nor in the results of the primary, but rather in criticizing the process by which the results were obtained. "Conditions referred to in Sunday's Constitution have been confirmed repeatedly by calls from every section of the city."

"In all honesty, the League must admit that some of their members may have contributed to the regrettable instances. We planned to hold a school of instruction for our members who were to work at the polls for the first time, but were assured that it would only be a repetition of the instructions which the managers would give them. Had we known that all managers were not going to give uniform and definite instructions, so that League members would have been prepared to see that laws were observed. "We are not charging willful dishonesty, but ignorance, lack of efficiency and uniformity."

New Complaints. The new complaints were listed as follows: A voter asked a manager if he scratched some of the unpollsed candidates for whom he did not want to vote, would his ballot be counted. The manager did not know, and he wondered what was done with his ballot. A member of the Democratic executive committee, running for re-election, helped to count the ballots at sixth ward, precinct B. Five persons reported seeing a candidate for city council helping to consolidate the returns. A worker at the polls reported that her husband had helped her count votes, but that she did not know it was wrong.

Several workers reported leaving the polls before the count was completed, and the box sealed, not knowing that their signature to the managers sheet was an oath that the count was correct. Several persons reported seeing a candidate pass out cards at a precinct, which is against a city ordinance.

McCarthy Leading With 70; Cree and Chap-

By BILL BONI.
MAMARONECK, N. Y., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Maurice "Hay Fever" McCarthy, who has been giving a good account of himself in high caliber golf since 1927, did so again today when he paced the first 18-hole qualifying round for the national amateur golf championship with a two-under-par 70.

This, over a Winged Foot G. C. west course which was playing long and proving difficult for

Scores of Atlantans in National Amateur qualifying:

Gaillard	543 454 345-37

Gaillard	345 444 554-38-75

Some of this country's finest Si-mo-ni-pu-res, was a sterling per-formance. But even so, it gave McCarthy a margin over his closest pursuers.

Actually he was the pursuer, since he came in last of the pace-setters. Bracketed behind him at 1 when the day's work was done were Dick Chapman, who croons occasionally and his good golf hole consistently; Jack Cree, a blond, husky 24-year-old from up-state New York; and Tom Whiteway, of Cleveland.

CREE OUT IN 34.

Cree, medalist in his sectional qualifying round, was playing in the tournament for the first time. He was out in 34, then held on well enough for a 37 coming home. Chapman played it the same way, while Whiteway was out in 35 and came back in par 36.

McCarthy, who had Bobby Jones down with 3 to go in the first round in 1927, didn't start out sensationally, but he staged a whirlwind finish. Two bogeys and a tie brought him to the turn in and nobody turned back at that point. McCarthy turned the heat. Smacking his irons, he shot that pay off on this 17th, with precision and de-cision laid his approaches on the 21st, 14th, 15th and 16th within three feet or less of the cup and put three birdies. But for a miss on an eight-foot birdie try at the 17th, he would have had a 69, one stroke from the course record.

WARD GETS 72.

Behind him and the three 71 pointers the brackets began getting crowded. Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Spokane, defending champion and favorite, found a lot of good company at par-72, including such contenders as trail-Bill Holt, of Syracuse; Skip Alexander, of Duke; Freddie Gaas, of New Orleans, and the hard-hitting veteran Ellis Nowles, who was a semifinalist in this tournament in 1906 and on the intercollegiate title for sale in 1907.

Gus Moreland, Harry Haverick, last year's first-round lead-er, and 1933 Champion George Gurnap had 73's; the 74 group took Ed Meister, of Cleveland; Johnny Burke, of Newport, R. I.; former Champion Jess Sweetser and last year's medalist, Tom Neenan, of Northville, Mich.

Farther back were Tommy Campbell, Art Doering and Wil-ber Wehrle, of Chicago; Gene Gaillard, of Atlanta, Ga.; and New England Champion Leonard Mar-son, 75; Frank Stracci, Pat Ab-ott and Ray Billows, 76; 1935 Champ Johnny Fischer and 1938 champion Willie Turnesa, 77, and 1937 Champ Johnny Goodman, Bruce McCormick, of Pasadena, Cal., and Tommy Barnes, of At-lanta, 78.

Of the older ex-titleholders Chick Evans was on the quality-ty brink with 79, and Francis Guinet, who couldn't can a putt, had 82. They'll have to struggle tomorrow if they hope to make a match play, for only 64 can qual-ify and 58 today had 76 or better.

GARRETT DIES.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 9.—(AP)—A heart attack last night caused the death of Frank Gar-rett, 51, widely known race horse trainer. Garrett had been visiting George Palmer, a starter at sev-eral of the country's race tracks, when he became ill.

All in the Game

BY JACK TROY

(Editor's Note: This is the 10th of a series of stories dealing with prospects of Southeastern conference foot-ball teams. Others will follow.)

Watch Out for the Wildcats!

No right-thinking person would stroke the head of Gar-gantua. By the same token, opponents of the University of Kentucky football team probably are not facing the future with light hearts.

Kentucky is hardly a championship prospect, but the Wildcats, perhaps, aren't far away. They were coming strong last year. Six wins, a tie and a couple of losses provided the best season in many a year.

Coach Ab Kirwan is considered a sort of Moses. He took over at Kentucky when football matters were at a low ebb. Morale was shattered and alumni were dispirited.

Within two years, Coach Kirwan has changed all this. Last year, his second, Kentucky surprised a lot of people. And this year prospects are much im-proved.

Kentuckians are not expecting a title but they do be-lieve that they will have an improved team over last year's, which was a delightful team to follow.

Coach Kirwan himself is optimistic about the team's chances, but he qualifies his enthusiasm by saying—

"There is no doubt that we will be considerably im-proved over last year, and we are hoping for another successful season; but just as we have im-proved so also will our opponents, and I hardly see how we can win more games than we did last season."

So there you are.

The Kentucky schedule is not quite as tough as last year's, however, and the won and lost record may be im-proved—if not more impressive.

There's a chance to get a great start with such early opponents as Baldwin-Wallace, Xavier, Washington and Lee, Vanderbilt and George Washington listed in a row before Georgia is met.

The Old Experience

Kentucky has experience. The squad embraces 17 seniors, 12 juniors and 21 sophomores, the latter from an undefeated freshman squad. There are 24 lettermen.

Losses were not grave. Joe Shepherd, a fine field gen-eral, blocker and kicker, was the chief loss. Joe was cap-tain. Other departed players include Bill McCubbin, end; Wilce Carnes, fullback; Luke Linden, tackle; Pete Vires and Tom Spickard, guards.

Even the loss of Shepherd is not harmful. Junior Jones was an adept understudy. He is brainy and perhaps even fancier than Shepherd as a runner and pass catcher. And he can block.

The Wildcats plan to make their opponents wild with the use of the two-team system again. The first outfit will be largely senior... nine of the eleven, with the other two start-ers juniors.

It is highly possible that the combination of elevens will prove as rough on opponents as $9.27 worth of heavy-grain sandpaper.

Backs Are Talented

Take such boys as Erial Allen, Noah Mullins, Junior Jones, Dave Zoeller and Charles Ishmael. They are back-field men of wide talents.

Allen is considered one of the finest passers the Wildcats have had in many years. He completed 13 out of 18 aerials against Tennessee's Rose Bowl aggregation last season. Allen also can run and kick. He is a real 155-pound scat back.

Mullins, shifted from fullback to halfback, is a speed merchant. He has run the century in less than 10 seconds. He makes Kentuckians think of Shipwreck Kelley.

Jones, smart signal caller and good blocker, is a nifty pass receiver as well. He is just the right type for Allen's tosses.

Ishmael, a senior fullback, was good all last season. W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, said he was the best full-back the Jackets faced all year—and they faced those of Notre Dame and Duke, also Auburn's Rufus Deal.

Zoeller is very versatile and will share the passing with Allen. Tommy Zinn will understudy Junior Jones. Carl Combs is another back of ability. Dave Brown's a good blocker. Sophomores to watch include Billy Black, Phil Cutchin and Bob Herbert.

Strength in the Line

John Eibner, captain and a 220-pound giant, heads a quartet of tackles any school would be proud of. Eibner is considered potential All-America. Versatile Walter Reid, 200, is his running mate. The other star tackles are Ed Jacobs, 230, and Larry Spears, 203.

The Wildcat guards include Bob Palmer, Emmett Willoughby, Eddie Fritz and Sam Huletta, all good. At center is the reliable Joe Bailey, with Mel French and Sophomore Charlie Walker in reserve.

The strength of the line extends uniformly to the wings. Jim Hardin was overshadowed by the departed McCubbin. He will come into his own. Phil Scott is a stand-out on the other flank, while Harry Denham is an unusually fine receiver.

Wildcat supporters, encouraged by last year's fine show-

Intercollegiate-Clay Court Champ Adds
National to List.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Donald McNeill, of Oklahoma City, added the national singles tennis championship to his clay court and intercollegiate titles at Forest Hills today when he de-feated champion Bobby Riggs, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 7-5.

McNeill, playing courageously, came from a two-set deficit to pound out a well-earned decision over the little Chicagoan.

A gathering of 7,500 gave Mc-Neill a tremendous ovation when he drove the final point at Riggs' feet.

McNeill grew progressively bet-ter as the match wore on and though his wobbly backhand had cost him the first two sets, he overcame that fault and made Riggs play his own way.

Alice Marble Wins
3d Straight National

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Alice Marble, of Los Angeles, un-defeated in competition since the 1939 semi-finals at Wimbledon, today won her third straight na-tional singles tennis championship by crushing Helen Hull Jacobs, former American champion, 6-2, 6-3 in a 45-minute match at For-est Hills.

The outcome of the match was never in doubt. The champion was on top of her game all the way, commanding a 4-0 lead in the first set before Miss Jacobs could take the aggressor's role.

Miss Jacobs, who won the American title four times in a row, managed two games in the first set, but was no match for the blonde who scored nine place-ments and committed only 21 er-rors.

Russell High
Must Replace Full Backfield

Wildcats Open Season
September 20 Against Hapeville Team.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Coach R. L. Boweh, who di-rects the destinies of the Russell Wildcat eleven, knows he has a tough job on his hands this year. All he has to do is replace David Morris, leading scorer of the N. G. I. C. last last; Bobby Bowen, his son, who was a brilliant south-paw passing wizard, and George Lyons and George Thomas, two other fine backs.

That is a complete backfield. That is a tough assignment. Even so, Boweh thinks perhaps his eleven may do as well or better than last year, when they copied seven while dropping three con-tests. The reason is a veteran line with a year's added experience. It was a severe blow when Char-lie Hooper, 190-pound tackle, broke his collarbone in practice, but he will be back in a month, and the season's opener with Hapeville High is almost two weeks away.

Only James Brooks and Lester Loehle, a pair of varsity end, were lost via graduation, and Leslie Roberts and Lewis Riggsby, two experienced flankmen, are com-ing along nicely as they fight it out for the left end berth. Tommy Dillard has been shifted from tackle to right end and seems to have what it takes there.

"Possum" Phillips is taking over capably again at one tackle, and Phelps Womble, a converted center, is filling in for the injured Hooper at the other. Ben Morris is back at center, and Wilford Fanning is back at his guard spot. Lucien Bowen, another of Coach Boweh's talented sons, is doing a good job for alma mater and dad at the other guard post.

Thomas Cranford, the only veteran back returning from last year, will ram the line from full-back again. Foster Ratterree bids fair to become a smart quarter-back. Leslie Baggett has taken to the right half chores like a duck to water, and J. W. Dempsey, whose brother Groover played for Russell a few years back, is at-tempting the herculean task of taking over David Morris' tailback duties. He and Cranford will do the passing.

SCHEDULE.

Laundry Outfit Paces Bowlers

The City League bowlers, top-flight pinmen of Atlanta, opened their scheduled competition on the downtown alleys last night with a round of heavy scoring registered on each of the eight teams.

The Model Laundry five turned in the first game with a count of 609 as they won the opener from Blick's Bowling Center. Joe Chambliss had 117, Al Turner 129, John McGuire 134, Ed Pearce 107 and Bill Berry 119 as they turned in the big game.

The Sunday School League, Commercial and Ladies' Georgia leagues also opened.

A NEW CHAMPION—Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, yesterday won the National singles championship by defeating Bobby Riggs in four sets. Shown at the cup presentation which followed the match are, left to right, Dwight Davis, donor of the cup; McNeill and Riggs. The new champion will meet Bitsy Grant in an exhibition at North-side Club Wednesday night.

Atlanta Tennis Fans Find Champion Tossed Into Laps

The national singles champion has been thrown right into the laps of Atlanta tennis fans.

When the Atlanta Lawn Tennis Association signed the hard-hit-ting Don McNeill to play an ex-hibition here Wednesday night it was hoped he would win the na-tional title. It's pretty tough to come through the country's fast-est field but the amiable Okla-homa City boy did it yesterday, defeating Bobby Riggs for the title.

THIRD VICTORY.

It was the third time this sea-son McNeill has beaten Riggs and it definitely proves his superiority to any amateur in tennis today.

The Atlanta exhibition will be McNeill's first match since win-ning the title and it will be played before the lowest-priced audi-ence ever to see national champ in action.

In an effort to stimulate the game in Atlanta, officials have announced general admission tickets will sell for 55 cents and box seats will go for $1.00.

The exhibition will be played at the Northside Tennis Club and reservations for tickets are being taken there.

Efforts to get Jack Kramer to oppose McNeill were unsuccessful and Bitsy Grant, who has defeated quite a few national champs in his day, will oppose the hard-hit-ting youth.

DOUBLES SCHEDULED.

Doubles also will be played with Grant and McNeill facing Russell Bobbitt and Don Buffington, both of Atlanta. Bobbitt teamed with Frank Guernsey to defeat Riggs and Welby Van Horn in the quarterfinals of the na-tional doubles meet recently.

Crackers Face
Joe Roxbury At Memphis

Richards To Send Poindexter Against Veverka
Wednesday Night.

By THAD HOLT.
Staff Correspondent.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 9.—Loose, gangling tree-top-tall Her-man Besse, who throws 'em from the southpaw side, is Atlanta's hope to get the jump in the Shaughnessy Series opener here tomorrow night against Memphis' third-place Chicks.

Big Besse feels like he doesn't owe the Chicks a thing. He is ready to mow 'em down. Herman won 17 games for Memphis last year, before he was sold to the Athletics. His earned run average of 2.48 runs per game was the best in the league.

Manager Paul Richards, con-victed lefthanders are more ef-fective against the Tribemen than normal pitchers, plans to shoot Jennings Poindexter at the enemy Wednesday night.

FACE ROXBURY.

Joe Roxbury, a crafty right-hander, is expected to get the opening call from Skipper Truck Hanna. Frank Veverka, pitcher-first baseman, may hurl Wednes-day night. He stopped the Crack-ers in Atlanta last week.

The Crackers figure to out-bat, out-run, out-pitch, out-score, out-battle, and even out-field the Chicks, who appear to have the edge at only one position—back of the plate. Richards is out of the series with a lame shoulder and little Dewey Williams must go it alone, with Sal Ferrara, talented rookie nursing a punctured finger. Sid Gautreaux and Frank Smith, of Memphis, form perhaps the best catching staff in the league.

The Chicks have no Aunt Besse. They have no Willard Marshall. Their outfield is weak defensively and their infield leaks, particularly since Frank Piet, a fair third baseman, was put on second base. Last week, with the bases empty, he caught a grounder and instead of throwing to first, tossed the ball to Shortstopper Lou Bush who had come over to second base.

14 GAMES AHEAD.

The Crackers, winding up in second place, finished 14 full games ahead of the Chicks. The Crackers probably are one of the strongest second-place teams in Southern League history. The Chicks don't have a pitcher or batter among the Southern leaders. Of course they aren't licked yet. They will show up for the opener tomorrow night. They may even go on to win the series and play-off. But the averages and stand-ings prove the Crackers to be the superior club.

Richards thinks his team has a good chance to win the Shaughnessy and play in the Dixie Series, despite his own absence from the lineup and the inability of Lester Burge to play. Paul prefers that his boys take care of the Tribemen first before there is any talk about meeting Nashville or Chattanooga in the playoff finals.

The Atlanta-Memphis series is for the best three out of five. The final series will be four out of seven.

FISH FOODS.

Fish feed on an odd assortment of foods, according to hatchery experts. Among some of the staples favored are elk, deer and horse meat, beef and duck blood, apple flour and ground beef. Fish also are fond of dairy products. Little fishes must have plant products, such as alfalfa, beans, bean meal, soy bean meal, peanut meal and oatmeal. Incidentally, like human babies, some species of young fish must have certain of their vitamins supplied by cod liver oil.

INSTALLMENT I

Brooke arrived at Manhattan's busiest hour. Following a red-cap, who carried the whole of her possessions in two shabby suitcases, she glanced at the moving throngs with dark eyes, excited and challenging. As she hurried, the collar of her brown sport coat buttoned high, a brown boyish felt hat over her dark hair, her black coat (her best coat) over her arm, her eyes took swift excursions to the women about her swathed in luxurious furs with absurd little black hats over perfectly coiffed heads. Rod saw women like them every day, amusing women, poised, successful women. Rod... Her thoughts scattered and raced ahead of their reunion a few hours hence, an eternity for her.

A few moments later, from a taxi window, New York at February dusk, its gay night lights beginning to blink and glitter, enchanted her. This time no train would take her back to the quiet New England town, her home, after a too brief weekend with Rod in New York. For this time, though Rod didn't know it yet, she had come to stay.

At the entrance of a moderately priced hotel the doorman sprang to attention and a boy hurried out for her baggage. She felt a blast of wintry wind, then the warmth of the lobby. On the register she wrote, "Miss Brooke Carter, Chatham, N. H.," and followed the boy to the elevator. As she stepped on she regarded her reflection in the mirror impersonally but with a smile, thinking, "So this is the girl Rod Westover is going to marry! She has a smudge on her face." A young artist who had come to New England to paint one summer had told her that her hair was the color of smoke. The expressive dark eyes were warm and alive though they had not been always, one guessed, as happy as they were now.

The room was small and cold and the narrow little bed seemingly inadequate after the huge four-poster in her bedroom at home. "I must learn to live in small rooms," she thought.

"Is there anything else?" the boy inquired politely.

"No. Nothing, thank you," wanting him to go so that she could call Rod.

When he went, she did not stop to take off her coat or hat or gloves, but went directly to the telephone and called Rod's office and waited anxiously, so afraid that he would be gone for the day.

But when a voice said merely "Hello," she was afraid and anxious no longer.

"This is Brooke!" The room was warm now. Would the sound of his voice reduce her to a bundle of nerves and emotions?

"Brooke!" incredulously. "Where... Why..."

"Here in New York," and laughed lightly as she gave him the name of the hotel. Then, "I didn't write you because there really wasn't time. And there were things I wanted to say and not write... tonight." If he said he couldn't see her tonight...

"Tonight?" with some uncertainty. "Oh, yes, of course. In about an hour. I've got to stay around awhile." Then with less uncertainty and more cheer, "Until then, darling."

An hour is interminable to one in love who waits...

Since they were children together in Chatham, going to the same school, the same church, the same parties, skating together in winter and swimming together in summer, her life had been colored and shaped by the dark-haired, dark-eyed boy who lived in a house as big and as shabby as her own just a block away from his. She could smile now at the doubts and uncertainties of a much younger Brooke as to the depths of Rod's feeling for her, her sharp silent hurt when she had seen him with another girl, and his failure to see her as frequently as she wished to see him. And, though uncertainties and doubts are never entirely eliminated, the nights had been less tormenting after, when she was sixteen, he told her that he loved her and she had come to be regarded, to the chagrin of several Chatham boys, as Rod Westover's 'girl'.

Twice tragedy had struck. Rod's father died suddenly and to support her son and herself and keep her home, Rod's capable mother Grace had rented rooms to transients, to retired old men and to disagreeable old ladies who could not live amicably with their children. That her tireless efforts to please her odd assortment of paying guests had been profitable was seen when Rod went to a western university from which he had been graduated three years ago. And Rod's going away to college was still remembered most vividly not only because his going was tragedy in itself to Brooke, but because her mother died two days after he had gone.

From a bright summer to the bleakest winter of her life she went that year, comforted only by Rod's letters and more perplexed at the problem of her father, a melancholy, pessimistic man to whom she had never been close, than by any of her own. And though she accepted with secret relief her father's announcement that he was going to marry Helen Bailey, who had a taught school in Chatham for 20 years, Brooke knew that the home would never be quite her own home again.

When her thoughts went back, it seemed to Brooke that her life since Rod went west to college had been devoted chiefly to waiting. Waiting for Rod to come home on long holidays, waiting for his letters, waiting for his graduation. Long before he told her, she had reconciled herself to the fact that he would not settle permanently in Chatham and make one of the plants or mills or small business houses his career. Nor had Grace been surprised, Brooke knew, when Rod announced that he had a position with a large corporation in New York in which he was making rapid progress.

Nothing she had ever done was important except where it concerned him. Certainly her job as secretary to Chatham's busiest physician had never been important, a job from which she had resigned without regret three days ago to accept another very different kind of job in New York.

She understood Rod and loved him and admired him though there were people in the town, including her father, who thought that he had become a hopeless snob. From her father, too, sarcastic remarks that Rod would never marry her had cut deeply. But far from feeling that Rod had outgrown the town and the people he had known all his life, and that he resented the slow tempo of their conservative, satisfied lives, she admired the ambition and sacrifice that had won him honors in college and the determination to succeed in business. Those who disapproved of him, she thought, lacked his energy and brilliance and foresight. A handsome boy but never gay or abandoned, intense, often moody, Rod had a giant plan for his life and it was enough for her to be part of it. Also quick to defend him was Grace, his mother, touchingly proud of him.

It was the summer after his junior year in college that he had asked Brooke to marry him. They had been sitting beneath a cluster of trees beside a lake with a picnic lunch spread before them on a gay red cloth when, without preface, he asked her. And she had said, "You know I will, Rod." And he had said, "But not until I'm established and making enough to support you properly." They had said a great many tender, ardent things that afternoon. His arms held her in a fierce embrace, their lips had clung often. A passionate and beautiful day to remember. Thereafter, she felt, they would always be bound.

For three years now she had come down to New York on week-ends whenever her budget would permit, Grace occasionally coming with her. Rod shared what his mother considered a scandalously untidy apartment with lanky, drawing Jim Bartlett, who had also shared his room in college and who had a position as accountant. But there were many weekends she did not see Rod, and last summer disappointment had almost made her ill when he wrote that he would not be in Chatham for his vacation this year because Mr. Glass, an important executive whose name Rod breathed with reverence, had invited him on an ocean fishing trip on his yacht, and it was an invitation he could not afford to refuse. Nor had he come home for Christmas this year, business taking him west. It had been three months now since she or his mother had seen him.

Continued Tomorrow.

DRAMA—Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne will be co-starred in a romance of high intrigue when "The First Nighter" presents "Cupid With a Crown" over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

"Cupid with a Crown" is the story of a publisher who is mistaken for a G-man by a refugee Princess and Crown Prince traveling with the crown jewels. The publisher, played by Les Tremayne, finds romance and the Princess, played by Barbara Luddy, thrilling but hazardous. Threats and intrigue follow the royal pair to America, where the Crown Prince further complicates matters when—innocently enough—he becomes acquainted with some persons of questionable character.

MUSICAL—A flash minstrel sketch based on the old Bert Williams "Somebody Else—Not Me," and featuring Singin' Sam and the Etan Boys, guests with Raymond Paige and his orchestra, will be one of the high spots in the Musical Americana program to be heard over WAGA at 8 o'clock tonight.

defense projects appeared ended today as hundreds of laborers returned to work.

A few demonstrators among native-born Panamanians and West Indians remained out, but officials said they expected they would be back at their jobs tomorrow. The strike began last Thursday when about half of the 1,200 workers demanded better food and living conditions and pay increases from 18 to 20 cents an hour to 30 cents for laborers and from 24 to 25 cents for artisans.

Crucial Times Ahead, Mrs. Roosevelt Warns

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(P)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today "there is no use fooling ourselves that we are not facing the most crucial conditions in world history."

"The youth of today must face that problem, as they will be responsible for what the world becomes," she told 250 students from 35 colleges at the Congress of International Student Service.

Seven Routes Marked With No-Pass Zones

Stronger Enforcement of Law on Passing Cars Pledged.

More stringent enforcement of the law prohibiting the passing of motor vehicles on curves and hills was promised yesterday by Lon Sullivan, head of the State Highway Patrol, as the division of traffic and safety of the State Highway Department announced that no-passing barrier lines had been placed on six United States routes and one state route.

"We have a Georgia law which prohibits passing on curves, hills or wherever vision is obscured, but there has sometimes been a question in the minds of the driver and the state patrolman as to what constituted a place where vision is obscured," Sullivan said. "These lines should now leave no doubt as to where obscuring of vision begins and ends, and will make it possible to enforce the law more rigidly."

In a letter to Sullivan, M. C. Bishop, director of the division of traffic and safety of the Highway Department, said no-passing lines had been laid on the following highways:

U. S. Route 17 (Coastal highway), from the South Carolina line to Darien; U. S. 23 (New Buford highway), Atlanta to North Carolina line; U. S. 29, Lawrenceville to junction with U. S. 78, west of Athens; U. S. 41, Marietta to Jonesboro; U. S. 78 (Bankhead highway), Alabama line to Atlanta; U. S. 80, Dublin to Savannah; and State Route 13, from Cornelia to the South Carolina line northeast of Toccoa.

Surveys to determine locations for the no-passing lines are conducted by the division of traffic and safety and the maintenance division of the highway department does the actual painting.

When a yellow line appears on the driver's side of the center line it means it is dangerous to pass another vehicle moving in the same direction on that section of road.

"The Highway Department is putting down these yellow lines to guard the motorist from danger," Bishop said. "Besides the element of safety involved, however, it also has been found that they are a distinct help in expediting the movement of traffic."

Arnall Attacks Hammett for Stand on Reds

Subversive Groups Pos- ing as Political Parties Scored in Letter.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall yesterday bitterly attacked Dashiell Hammett, chairman of the committee on election rights of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, for his criticism of Georgia's action in barring Communists from the ballot.

The attorney general exhibited some material he received from Hammett protesting the decision of several states in refusing to place candidates of certain political parties on the ballot.

Replying to Hammett by letter, Arnall said:

"I have no patience with groups masquerading under the label of so-called political parties which, in fact, are revolutionary in character and which seek to sabotage and overthrow by force our constitutional form of government. In most instances such groups are largely financed by foreign governments."

"We have recently watched 10 democracies wiped from the face of the earth by compromising with subversive organizations and influences. I believe that at last America is awakened to the danger of these foreign revolutionary groups which your organization, apparently, champions. I am glad that 17 other states are as militantly intolerant of these groups as are the people of Georgia."

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
JEFFERSON, Ga., Sept. 9.—Jefferson's Methodist church started the week free of debt.

The Rev. A. B. Elizer and members of the board of stewards yesterday burned a $20,000 mortgage, signed by 18 members of the congregation 15 years ago to make possible completion of their $64,000 edifice. The old church was burned in 1924 and construction of the new one was begun the following year.

"Dinner on the grounds," a barbecue and an afternoon of singing otherwise featured yesterday's home-coming celebration. Fourteen former pastors were present.

Dunaway Gives His Platform For Legislature

Edgewood Attorney Can- didate for Representa- tive in DeKalb.

John A. (Hop) Dunaway, Edgewood attorney, has announced his candidacy for the state legislature as a representative from DeKalb county to succeed Augustine Sams, who is not seeking re-election.

A volunteer veteran of the World War, Dunaway is a graduate of Emory College and Emory Law School. He is the immediate past president of the Stone Mountain Circuit Bar Association and is licensed to practice in any court.

He is past master of Kirkwood lodge 548, F. & A. M.; a past master of the fifth district Masonic convention and present chairman of the grand lodge finance committee. He also is a member of the Decatur Elks lodge 1602, and has been the Democratic committeeman from Edgewood for the past six years.

His announcement reads:

"My election to the state legislature, representing DeKalb county, will give me an opportunity to fulfill my obligations to the people of my community. These obligations are that I will:

"Accept no fees for drawing bills for introduction in the legislature; seek to pay school teachers on the same basis with all other state employees; support the further development of agriculture, livestock and dairying and adequate aid for the present state program of health and social welfare."

"Be under obligation to no other candidate or group, but will cast my vote according to my own best judgment; have no political enemies in the legislature; co-operate with any administration elected by the people; fight any attempt to vary the present DeKalb county boundaries."

"Support a county waterworks system to provide adequate water at minimum rates; co-operate with the DeKalb delegation for the county's best interests; seek a proper solution to our pardon and parole problems; seek to amend the charter of Atlanta so as to provide an adequate pension fund for police officers from sources other than fines in police court, as at present."

Notice ### to FULTON COUNTY VOTERS:

There appeared in both of the Atlanta papers on September 7 a large-sized newspaper advertisement as an open letter to me, signed by eight legislative railroad agents, which letter contained many misleading and false statements. Four of the signers of this advertisement have in each of my previous elections opposed me very bitterly. One of the signers lives in Cobb County and is not a resident and cannot vote in Fulton County. Another of the signers is a resident of Muscogee County and cannot vote in Fulton County. Still another of the signers is a resident of Dougherty County and cannot vote in Fulton County. I do not believe that the people of Fulton County will allow outsiders, who are paid legislative agents, to come into Fulton County and tell them who they shall or shall not support for public office.

Apparently my opponent in this race has no platform in the interest of economy and efficiency, good government, taxes, health and schools or the many other vital things of interest to the people of this county.

MY RECORD Speaks for Itself

During my term in the State Senate I have introduced and helped pass the following bills:

1. Separate Senatorial District for Fulton County.
2. Pension System for County Employees.
3. Budget Law for City of Atlanta and Fulton County.
4. Fulton County Zoning Law.
5. State Highway Maintenance of City Highway Streets.
6. Creation of Centralized State Purchasing Agency which is saving the taxpayers over $1,000,000 annually.
7. Uniform Narcotic Law.
8. Obscene Literature Law (to protect our children from this menace).
9. Atlanta Permanent Registration Law.

I have consistently favored a better school and health program, all labor measures benefiting the working man and women, Civil Service legislation, the secret ballot for all county and state elections, the Full Crew Law for railroad men, and the 50 Freight Car Limit Law.

I have been equally as energetic in opposing waste and extravagance in government and unfair tax discrimination against Fulton County citizens.

I PLEDGE TO ALL THE PEOPLE OF FULTON COUNTY MY CONTINUED CONSTRUCTIVE SERVICE, AND URGE ALL FAIR-MINDED CITIZENS NOT TO LET THIS FALSE AND MISLEADING PROPAGANDA CAMPAIGN OF THE OPPOSITION INFLUENCE THEIR VOTE NEXT WEDNESDAY.

9 Men Admit Violating U. S. Liquor Laws

Pleas Heard by Judge Underwood as Federal Court Reopens.

Nine men pleaded guilty to charges of violating federal liquor laws before United States District Judge E. Marvin Underwood yesterday, as United States court for the northern district of Georgia reopened after a summer recess.

In addition, the federal grand jury returned two indictments after a morning of deliberation. One true bill charged Ross Langston and Joe Gunn with violation of the national motor vehicle theft act, the other accused James L. Pruitt of "buying and forging" a stolen government check. The check was made out for $33.17.

For the first time in its history, two northern district judges presided. Judge Robert L. Russell, recently appointed by the President as additional judge for the district, heard short, civil non-jury cases, adjourning shortly before noon.

Holding criminal court, Judge Underwood heard the nine guilty pleas, sentenced some, deferred sentences on others, presided over the trial of Ed Allen, of Gwinnett county, who was found guilty of liquor charges, heard the grand jury's report, and at 2 o'clock adjourned both court and the grand jury until 10 o'clock this morning.

Pulp Plants In South Are Named in Suits

Violations of Fair Labor Standards Act Charged; 17,000 Involved.

Ten pulp and paper manufacturing plants in seven southern states have been named in three injunction suits recently filed by the wage and hour division, Department of Labor.

Charging violations of the fair labor standards act, the suits seek to enjoin three companies from shipping their products in interstate commerce. More than 17,000 workers engaged in cutting pulpwood are involved.

Companies named are the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, North Charleston, S. C.; N. E. Spence & Sons, Richmond, Va.; and the Southern Kraft Corporation, of New York, employers of approximately 15,000 woodmen in its eight southern plants.

Successful prosecution of the suits, the wage-hour office has estimated, will result in a three-million-dollar annual increase in wages paid to southern woodmen.

McRae's Deception Exposed by Boykin

In the press and on the radio McRae, the "BUNCO POLITICAL SPIELER," has resorted to every deception and political trick known to the rankest demagogue in his fast-failing campaign to defeat

John A. Boykin

for Re-election as Solicitor General

McRae Attempts to Deceive Labor

McRae attempted to deceive labor through a Columbus (Ga.) meddler, into believing that their leaders had endorsed McRae. Mr. Dewey Johnson, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor; Mr. Charles B. Gramling, former president, and Mr. H. E. Ivey, chairman legislative board of Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, condemned this attempt. (See their statements in both Sunday Atlanta dailies.)

OTHER RAILROAD MEN CONDEMN ACTION

Charles Lewef, yardmaster Atlanta Joint Terminals; C. R. Sayre, and George P. Finley, say:

"Heath is a resident of Muscogee county, and no railroad man and voter of Fulton county can do other than repudiate the action of Bill Heath in attempting, without any authority at all, to invade Fulton county politics, by dictating to us a scandalous letter, heavily surcharged with false statements, in the hope of diverting, at the last minute, our sound judgment in making a selection between OUR Solicitor General, John A. Boykin, and a POLITICAL ADVENTURER."

McRae Attempted to Deceive the People About a Secret Trade With the Bug "Big Shots"

The foreman and secretary of the Grand Jury which indicted the bug "big shots" expose this deception. Their statement follows:

"As foreman and secretary of that particular grand jury we are in position to say that NO SECRET TRADE was made by E. E. Andrews with the lottery operators. Mr. Andrews was sent, with a notary public, to a hotel and other places for the sole purpose of obtaining sworn, signed and written confessions from the lottery operators, with the KNOWLEDGE AND APPROVAL OF THE COURTS AND THE GRAND JURY."

"M. M. EWING, Foreman. FRED J. COOLEGE, Secretary."

Dr. Louie Newton's Final Letter

McRae attempted to deceive the people into believing that Dr. Louie D. Newton condemned the lottery prosecution by concealing the second letter written by Dr. Newton after he learned all the facts. We quote from Dr. Newton's letter of December 21, 1937, to the editor of the Atlanta Georgian, and which was published:

"May I take this occasion * * * to express appreciation of the courageous work of Assistant Solicitor E. E. Andrews in apprehending and prosecuting a number of persons involved in this lawless lottery enterprise. * * * The fact that Judge Pomeroy and Solicitor Andrews have already revoked three of these suspended sentences reassures the public of the wisdom of their action, and I am grateful * * * for court officials who have shown such courage and faithfulness. Sincerely yours, "L. D. NEWTON, Pastor."

There Is No Falsehood as Convincing as a Half Truth Which Is Used to Make the False Sound Plausible

"Pee Wee" Burns Charge Exploded

"Pee Wee" Burns was indicted and immediately made a written demand for trial. He was tried and convicted. The court—not the Solicitor—granted a new trial. Before he could be tried the second time State witnesses had been spirited away. Thus his demand, under the law, operated as a discharge. McRae knows that when witnesses are not available a case cannot be prosecuted, because he knows this in the manner in which he escaped prosecution in Miami, Fla. The state's witnesses there had suddenly and mysteriously disappeared.

49 County Employees Received Back Salary Checks

Why criticize Boykin for receiving his salary fixed by the legislature, and not by the County Commissioners, when 49 other county employees, including some of the judges, were paid back salaries, which were fixed by law, and were a legal and binding obligation on the county? Should a creditor not be paid merely because he has extended time of payment?

Why George T. Finley Left McRae's Ticket in a Previous Race for Solicitor General

George T. Finley, a retired railroad man, says: "Political conditions became so rotten and so dishonorable I ceased all activity in McRae's behalf before election, as in all decency I had to condemn the circularizing of McRae's untrustworthy scandal sheet."

BEWARE OF LAST-MINUTE FALSE STATEMENTS

Remember, Boykin's Nearly 8,000 Majority Received in the Last Election Against McRae Will Again Be Repeated or Bettered
